Efficiency and Justice in European Antitrust Enforcement

WOUTER PJ WILS

OXFORD AND PORTLAND, OREGON

2008
Contents

Introduction and Acknowledgements v
Table of Cases xv
Table of Legislation xxiii

1 Powers of investigation and Procedural Rights and Guarantees: The Interplay between European and National Legislation and Case Law 1

1.1 Powers of Investigation 1
   1.1.1 Different Ways of Gathering Intelligence and Evidence 1
   1.1.2 Cases Dealt with by the European Commission 3
      1.1.2.1 Information-gathering by the Commission Itself 3
      1.1.2.2 Assistance by the (Competition) Authorities of the Member States 6
   1.1.3 Cases Dealt with by a Competition Authority of a Member State 9
      1.1.3.1 Information-gathering by the National Competition Authority Itself 9
      1.1.3.2 Assistance by the Competition Authorities of Other Member States 11

1.2 Procedural Rights and Guarantees 12
   1.2.1 Procedural Rights and Guarantees Circumscribing or Limiting Powers of Investigation 12
   1.2.2 Information Collected and Used by the Commission 14
   1.2.3 Information Collected and Used by the Same National Competition Authority 19
   1.2.4 Information Exchanged through the European Competition Network 20

2 Settlements of Antitrust Investigations: Commitment Decisions under Article 9 of Regulation 1/2003 25

2.1 Text, Origin and Optimal Use 25
   2.1.1 Text 25
   2.1.2 Origin 26
   2.1.3 Optimal Use 29

2.2 Procedure 33
   2.2.1 Initiation of Proceedings and Preliminary Assessment 33
   2.2.2 Access to the File 34
2.2.3 Consultation, Adoption and Publication 36

2.3 Content and Effects 37
  2.3.1 Type of Commitments 37
  2.3.2 'No longer grounds for action by the Commission without concluding whether or not there has been or still is an infringement' 37
  2.3.3 'Binding on the undertakings': Enforcement of Commitment Decisions 39
  2.3.4 Further Proceedings in National Courts or by National Competition Authorities Concerning Past Behaviour 41
  2.3.5 Further Proceedings in National Courts or by National Competition Authorities Concerning Future Conduct 42

2.4 Judicial Review 44

2.5 Other Settlements 45
  2.5.1 Informal Settlements 45
  2.5.2 Commitment Decisions by National Competition Authorities 45
  2.5.3 Settlements Including the Payment of a Fine 46

3 Optimal Antitrust Fines: Theory and Practice 49

3.1 The Role of Fines in Antitrust Enforcement 50
  3.1.1 The Three Tasks of Competition Law Enforcement 50
    3.1.1.1 Clarifying the Content of the Prohibitions 50
    3.1.1.2 Preventing Violations 51
      3.1.1.2.1 Reducing the Opportunities to Commit Violations 51
      3.1.1.2.2 Reducing Business People’s Willingness to Commit Violations 52
      3.1.1.2.3 Altering the Balance of Expected Benefits and Costs of Violations 52
    3.1.1.3 Dealing with the Consequences of Violations 53
  3.1.2 The Role of Fines 55

3.2 Optimal Fines for Single Offenders 56
  3.2.1 The Basic Logic of Deterrence 56
    3.2.1.1 The Deterrence Approach as Opposed to the Internalisation Approach 56
    3.2.1.2 Subjective Estimates of the Gain, the Probability of Detection and Punishment and the Amount of the Fine 59
      3.2.1.2.1 Availability Bias 59
      3.2.1.2.2 Overconfidence Bias 60
3.2.2 The Trade-off between the Level of Fines and the Probability of Detection and Punishment
   3.2.2.1 The Standard Economic Argument and its Limits 61
   3.2.2.2 The Limits to High Fines 62
      3.2.2.2.1 Inability to Pay 62
      3.2.2.2.2 The Social and Economic Costs of High Fines 63
      3.2.2.2.3 Proportional Justice 64
3.2.3 Rewarding Cooperation and Efforts at Compliance 65
   3.2.3.1 Cooperation with the Competition Authority’s Investigation 66
   3.2.3.2 Compliance Programmes 67
3.3 Optimal Fines for Collective Violations 68
   3.3.1 Additional Possibilities for Using Fines to Prevent Violations
      3.3.1.1 Raising the Cost of Setting Up and Running Cartels 69
      3.3.1.2 Leniency 70
      3.3.2 Additional Aspects to Consider 70
         3.3.2.1 The Impact of High Fines on the Market Structure 70
         3.3.2.2 Equal Treatment 71
3.4 Can the Optimal Fine be Calculated in Practice? 73

4 The European Commission’s 2006 Guidelines on Fines 77
4.1 Summary of the Guidelines 77
4.2 The Purpose of Fines 79
4.3 The Purpose of Guidelines, and the Question of Foreseeability 81
   4.3.1 What are Guidelines For? 81
   4.3.2 How foreseeable should the Amount of Fines Be? 85
4.4 Basic Amount of the Fine 87
   4.4.1 The New Method 87
   4.4.2 Comparison with Earlier Methods 87
   4.4.3 Analysis 90
4.5 Adjustments to the Basic Amount 93
   4.5.1 Aggravating Circumstances 93
      4.5.1.1 Repeated Infringement 94
      4.5.1.2 Refusal to Cooperate with or Obstruction of the Commission’s Investigations 100
   4.5.1.3 Leader, Instigator or Coercer 101
   4.5.2 Mitigating Circumstances 103
4.5.2.1 Termination as Soon as the Commission Intervenes 103
4.5.2.2 Negligence 104
4.5.2.3 Substantially Limited Role (Cheating) 105
4.5.2.4 Cooperation outside the Leniency Notice 107
4.5.2.5 Encouragement by Public Authorities or by Legislation 108
4.5.3 Specific Increase for Deterrence (Large Undertakings and/or Amount of the Illicit Gains) 108
4.5.4 Legal Maximum 110
4.5.5 Application of the Leniency Notice 111
4.5.6 Ability to Pay 111

5 Leniency: Theory and Practice 113

5.1 Introduction 113
5.1.1 Definition 113
5.1.2 Examples 113
5.1.2.1 US Department of Justice 113
5.1.2.2 The European Commission 118
5.1.2.3 Competition Authorities of the EU Member States 121
5.1.3 History 122

5.2 Contribution to Optimal Antitrust Enforcement 125
5.2.1 Optimal Antitrust Enforcement and the Imposition of Penalties 125
5.2.2 Positive Effects of Leniency 127
5.2.2.1 Improved Collection of Evidence and Intelligence 127
5.2.2.2 Increased Difficulty of Creating and Maintaining Cartels 131
5.2.2.3 Lower Costs of Adjudication 132
5.2.2.4 Restitution to Injured Parties 133
5.2.3 Risks of Negative Effects 134
5.2.3.1 Lowering of the Penalty Level 134
5.2.3.2 Exclusive Reliance on Leniency 136
5.2.3.3 Facilitation of the Creation and Maintenance of Cartels 137
5.2.3.4 Negative Moral Effects 139
5.2.4 Measuring the Effects of Leniency 140

5.3 Obstacles to the Introduction of Leniency Policies 142
5.3.1 Objections of Principle 142
5.3.2 Institutional Problems 143

5.4 Some Further Issues 144
5.4.1 Leniency and Criminal Penalties on Individuals 144
5.4.2 Leniency and Follow-on Private Actions for Damages 147
5.4.3 Leniency in Multiple Jurisdictions 148
5.4.4 ‘Amnesty Plus’ 149
5.4.5 Positive Financial Rewards or Bounties 151
5.4.5.1 Rewards to Companies that Participated in Cartels 151
5.4.5.2 Rewards to Individual Cartel Offenders 152
5.4.5.3 Rewards to Non-offender Informants 153

6 Is Criminalisation the Answer? 155

6.1 What do We Mean by ‘Criminalisation’? 155
6.1.1 No Definition of ‘Criminal’ in EC or EU Law 155
6.1.2 Distinguishing Characteristics of Criminal Law 156
6.1.2.1 Criminal Penalties 156
6.1.2.2 Criminal Intent 157
6.1.2.3 Moral Condemnation 157
6.1.2.4 Less Strict Relationship between Penalty and Harm 157
6.1.2.5 Criminal Powers of Investigation 158
6.1.2.6 Criminal Rights of Defence 158
6.1.2.7 Links between the Six Characteristics 158
6.1.3 The Wider Notion of ‘Criminal’ in the European Convention on Human Rights 159

6.2 Is There a Tendency to Criminalise Antitrust Enforcement in the EU Member States? 161
6.2.1 US Antitrust Enforcement 161
6.2.2 Antitrust Enforcement at the Level of the EU Institutions 164
6.2.3 The EU Framework for Antitrust Enforcement in the EU Member States 167
6.2.3.1 Member States can Criminalise their Enforcement of Articles 81 and 82 EC 168
6.2.3.2 Member States cannot Criminalise the Enforcement of Only their National Competition Laws 169
6.2.4 Decriminalisation and Criminalisation of Antitrust Enforcement in the EU Member States 173
6.2.4.1 Decriminalisation on the One Hand 173
6.2.4.2 Criminalisation on the Other Hand 175

6.3 Is Criminalisation of Antitrust Enforcement Desirable? 177
6.3.1 Five Arguments in Favour of Imprisonment 177
6.3.1.1 Effective Deterrence with Only Fines on Companies would Require Impossibly High Fines 177
6.3.1.2 Fines on Companies do not Always Guarantee Adequate Incentives for Responsible Individuals within the Firm 181
6.3.1.3 Increased Effectiveness of Leniency and Whistle Blowing Programmes 182
6.3.1.4 Imprisonment is a Very Effective Deterrent 183
6.3.1.5 Imprisonment Carries a Uniquely Strong Moral Message 185

6.3.2 For Which Types of Antitrust Violations is Imprisonment Desirable? 185
6.3.3 Are There no Equally Effective Alternatives to Imprisonment? 186
   6.3.3.1 Fines on Individuals 187
   6.3.3.2 Director Disqualification 187
   6.3.3.3 Private Actions for Damages 188

6.3.4 Five Conditions for Criminal Antitrust Enforcement to be Effective not only in Theory but also in Practice 188
   6.3.4.1 The Need for a Dedicated Investigator and Prosecutor 189
   6.3.4.2 The Need for Adequate Powers of Investigation 189
   6.3.4.3 Judges and Juries must be Willing to Convict 191
   6.3.4.4 The Need for Political and Public Support 191
   6.3.4.5 Fines on Companies and Public Penalties for Other Antitrust Violations than Hard-core Cartels Remain Necessary 192

6.4 Is it Problematic that Antitrust Enforcement is Criminalised at the Level of Individual EU Member States Without Parallel Criminalisation at the Level of the EU Institutions, or Without EU Harmonisation? 193
   6.4.1 Regulation 1/2003 has been Designed to Accommodate Criminalisation in Individual Member States 193
   6.4.2 What would Be the Advantages of Criminalising the Enforcement of EU Antitrust Law in all Member States, through EU Harmonisation, as well as at the Level of the EU Institutions? 195

6.5 Would it be Legally Possible to Criminalise Antitrust Enforcement at the Level of the EU Institutions, or to Criminalise Antitrust Enforcement in all EU Member States through EU Harmonisation? 197
   6.5.1 Under the Current EC Treaty 197
   6.5.2 Under the Signed but Unratified Constitutional Treaty 199

Index 203