CONTENTS

Preface xi

Preface to First Edition xiii

Abbreviations xv

1. Comparative Law as an Academic Discipline 1
   Comparative Law not just a method of study, 1: comprises more than one discipline, 3: as an independent academic discipline is not study of one foreign system or elementary account of various systems or primarily matter of drawing comparisons, 4: is study of relationship between systems, 6

2. The Perils of Comparative Law 10
   Superficiality, 10: getting foreign law wrong, 10: impossibility of being systematic, 11: desire to find pattern of development, 12: Diamond’s views on the XII Tables, 13: arguing too easily to another system, 15

3. The Virtues of Comparative Law 16
   Understanding of nature of law and of legal development, 16: systematic study of foreign system, 17: unsystematic knowledge, 17: the subject matter, historical relationship, 18: borrowing and transmissibility, 19: rules and their effects, 19

4. Introduction to Legal Transplants 21
   The paradox, law ‘the spirit of the people’ yet transplants of law overwhelmingly common and important, 21: the goring ox in the Ancient Near East, 22: the Roman XII Tables and questionable Greek influence, 25: mediaeval and later development of action for personal disfigurement, 27: types of major transplants, 29

5. Romans and Roman Law in Roman Egypt 31
   Persons, 32: contract, 33: significance of changes, 34: Bentham and English law in Bengal, 35
6. Roman Systematics in Scotland

7. The Reception of Roman Law in Scotland

8. Meaning and Authority

Drunkenness in Rome and Holland, 57: Chapter 2 of lex Aquilia, 58: Lex Romana Raetica Curiensis, 59

9. Lo Codi

10. The Early Law of the Massachusetts Bay Colony

11. English Law in New Zealand

Persons, 71: contract and torts, 73: property, 73: continuing closeness of English and New Zealand law, 74: a New Zealand tendency, 74

12. Roman Law in the Late Republic

Great period of legal development, 75: and of Hellenisation of Rome, 75: but not of its law, 75: iniuria, 76:
Contents

Arria, 76: systematisation, 77: transplants not essential for major legal development, 77

13. Lex Aquilia: Reception and Non-Reception
General acceptance of reception, 79: in South Africa, 79: contrary view of Thomasius, 79; and of Heineccius, 80: danger of exaggeration of reception, 81

14. Transfer of Ownership and Risk in Sale

15. Authority Again
Law given by Yahveh, Apollo and Zeus, 88: codification and national heroes, despots and military leaders, 88: central rôle of authority, 89: brain-washing by authority of Roman law, 90: Attic law, 90: Scottish Law Commission, 91: books and language, Latin and the bulk of the Corpus Juris Civilis, 93: Blackstone's Commentaries in America, 93

16. Some General Reflections

17. Comparative Law and Legal History
Comparative law and history, 102: Louisiana Civil Code of 1808, 103: Scottish criminal law, 105

Afterword