The Application of EC Law in Arbitration Proceedings

dr. Natalya Shelkopylas
Contents

CHAPTER I
General Introduction
1.1 Arbitration and EC law: Ne'er the twain shall meet? 3
1.1.1 Arbitration and state courts' adjudication 3
1.1.2 Arbitration perception of EC law 9
1.1.3 Specific characteristics of EC law and arbitration 12
1.2 The present research: Questions addressed 16

Part I
EC Law: Objectives Pursued and Requirements Imposed

CHAPTER 2
EC Law as an Integral Part of National Legal Order
2.1 Introduction 27
2.2 Supremacy 29
2.3 Direct effect of EC law 32
2.3.1 Direct effect of EC law: Conditions 32
2.3.2 Directives and their effects in national legal order 38
2.3.2.1 Direct effect of directives 38
2.3.2.2 Consistent interpretation 46
2.3.2.3 Incidental direct effect 53
2.3.2.4 Some recent developments in the private context 59
2.3.2.5 Conclusions 67
2.4 Some preliminary reflections on the relevance of the preceding discussions to the present research 70

CHAPTER 3
3.1 Introduction 77
3.2 Case law on various time-limits and other procedural limitations 82
3.2.1 Taking particular circumstances into account: The Member State's fault and access to judicial proceedings 83
3.2.2 Distancing from Emmott: Limits on retrospective claims 85
3.2.3 Recurrence of Emmott: The influence of fault 86
3.2.4 Rationalising the Court's approach 89
3.2.5 Giving substance to the 'equivalence' test 90
3.3 Van Schijndel and Peterbroeck: The procedural 'rule of reason' test 92
3.3.1 Legitimate aims of national procedural restrictions and the requirement of effectiveness: The development of parameters of a balancing exercise 93
3.3.2 The 'rule of reason' test: Clarifying or complicating? 96
CHAPTER 4
Application of the Principles Formulated by the Court with Regard to National Procedures and Remedies in the Context of Arbitration

4.1 Introduction: Eco Swiss
4.2 EC competition rules as public policy rules
4.3 Public policy in the context of proceedings for setting aside of arbitral awards
4.4 Requirements regarding judicial review in matters of arbitration
4.5 Conclusions

Part II
Interaction between Arbitration and EC Law

CHAPTER 5
An Overview of Arbitration Cases Raising Community Law Issues

5.1 Introduction
5.2 An overview of arbitration cases raising Community law issues: Preliminary remarks
5.3 Characteristics of the disputes
5.3.1 Parties' nationalities
5.3.2 Types of claims
5.3.3 Circumstances of invocation of EC law issues
5.3.3.1 EC law as the governing law agreed on by the parties
5.3.3.2 Invocation of EC law by the parties
   As the legal basis of their claim
   As a defensive device (substantive and jurisdictional defence)
5.3.3.3 Application of EC law by arbitrators
   Admissibility of invocation of EC law
   Application of EC law to the merits of the case
5.4 Conclusions
CHAPTER 6

The General Problem of the Relationship between Arbitration and Public Policy

6.1 Introduction 171
6.2 Terminology in different legal contexts: More than semantic differences 172
6.2.1 French/Civil law v. Common law traditions 172
6.2.2 The Rome Convention and the Brussels Convention 173
6.2.3 European Community public policy 174
6.2.4 Truly international public policy 179
6.2.5 Terminology in the present research 180
6.3 Public policy before state courts 181
6.3.1 Domestic (internal) situations. Domestic mandatory rules 181
6.3.2 In the private international law context 185
6.3.2.1 Choice of laws (conflict of laws) process 185
   Public policy exception 185
   Lois de police / international mandatory rules 188
   Public policy v. rules of public policy and Lois de police: The critique 193
   Conclusions 197
6.3.2.2 Recognition and enforcement of foreign judgments 198
   Illustration 200
   Judgments – the Brussels Convention and the follow up Regulation 44/2001 201
6.3.2.3 Public policy in arbitration-related court proceedings 206
6.4 Conclusions 209

CHAPTER 7

EC Competition Law as a System of Rules Expressing Public Policy Considerations

7.1 Introduction 213
7.2 The overall values and goals of competition law 214
7.2.1 Underlying public policy objectives of EC competition law 219
7.2.2 Preliminary conclusions 228
7.3 Competition law on the international plane 229
7.4 Features and characteristics of EC competition rules 233
7.4.1 Competition rules as mandatory rules expressing domestic public policy 233
7.4.2 Competition rules as Lois de police (rules of immediate application) 233
7.4.3 Competition rules as public policy rules: The critique 234
7.5 Conclusions 237
Part III Grounds of Application of EC Law in Arbitration

CHAPTER 8 Arbitrability
  8.1 Introduction 245
  8.2 Arbitrability in general 246
  8.3 Methods of determination of arbitrability and their application to the arbitrability of EC competition matters 247
  8.4 Obstacles to arbitrability in EC competition law 254
  8.5 Conclusions 256

CHAPTER 9 Application of EC Law by Arbitrators
  9.1 Introduction 261
  9.2 Choice of applicable law by arbitrators: A comparative survey of arbitration acts, treaties, arbitration rules and arbitration practice 264
    9.2.1 Respect of party autonomy by arbitrators - a cornerstone principle 264
    9.2.2 The powers of arbitrators to determine the applicable law in the absence of the parties' choice 266
  9.3 Grounds of application of EC law: The perspective of private international law and arbitration - a special case for EC mandatory rules? 273
    9.3.1 Application of EC law as part of the lex contractus (lex causae) 275
      9.3.1.1 Selected by the parties 276
      9.3.1.2 Selected by arbitrators 281
    9.3.2 Application of EC mandatory law outside lex contractus 282
      9.3.2.1 Reasons and justifications for application of lois de police of third states 283
      Theories of lois de police of third states in arbitration 283
  9.4 Conclusions 291
    9.4.1 Party autonomy and arbitrators' discretion as grounds of application of EC law: Privatisation of law through arbitration - converting mandatory rules into default rules 291
    9.4.2 The exceptional 'lois de police' ground of application of EC law 294
    9.4.3 Breaking away from the trodden path 295

CHAPTER 10 The European Law Perspective of the Possible Grounds of Application of Community Law in Arbitration
  10.1 Introduction 301
  10.2 A critical overview of the European approach and its underlying methodology 302
CHAPTER II

10.2.1 Intrinsic features of EC law as grounds for its application in arbitration proceedings (supremacy, direct effect, effectiveness, and uniform application)

Bringing EC law into focus
What is good for courts is good for arbitral tribunals?
A universal 'reserve' argument

10.2.2 Public policy character of EC law: Reception and adaptation of private international law and civil law concepts in the search for the grounds of application of EC law in arbitration

A duty created by a suspended sword?
Illustration
Do arbitral awards escape the law of probability?

10.3 Conclusion

CHAPTER II

Practical Issues of Application of EC Law

II.1 Introduction

II.2 Pleading and proof of EC law: Specificity of arbitral adjudication

II.2.1 The consensual character of arbitral jurisdiction and the scope of arbitration agreement

II.2.2 The principle of judicial passivity of arbitrators and ex officio application of EC law

Judicial passivity and freedom of disposition as a hallmark of arbitral adjudication
Ex officio without the 'office'?

II.2.3 Proving the content of EC law

II.3 Available remedies

II.4 Interpretation of EC law

II.5 Conclusion

PART IV

Safeguards of Application of EC Law in Arbitration

CHAPTER 12

Ex Post Control by the Courts

12.1 Introduction

12.2 Control over arbitral awards by state courts: an overview

12.2.1 Means, meaning, and specific goals of judicial control

12.3 Means and extent of state courts' control

12.3.1 Setting aside proceedings

12.3.2 Refusal of recognition and enforcement

12.3.2.1 Setting aside and refusal of enforcement compared

12.3.3 Public policy as the most relevant ground for the exercise of the control over compliance with EC law at the setting aside or enforcement stage: A hypothesis
12.3.3.1 Public policy ground at the setting aside or enforcement stage: Its meaning

Exception of public policy as a bar to the recognition of the legal effects of arbitral awards
Lois de police as part of the mechanism of public policy exception?

12.3.3.2 Principles of the exercise of the ex post control on the public policy ground

Two rival views: The dividing line
‘Positivist’ view
Illustration
‘Traditional’ view
Implications

12.3.4 Appeal against the award on the points of law: The traditional English solution

12.4 The role of the ECJ and the procedure of Article 234 EC in the state courts’ control over arbitral awards

12.5 Control of arbitral awards by the courts of the EC Member States and outside the Community: A case of double standards?

12.6 Appraisal of the ways in which the application of EC law in arbitration proceedings is safeguarded

CHAPTER 13

Assistance from Various National and Community Institutions as a Safeguard Mechanism in the Application of European Law in Arbitration

13.1 Introduction

13.2 National courts’ assistance in the application of EC law via traditional mechanisms

13.3 Role of the ECJ and Article 234 EC procedure

13.3.1 Direct reference to the ECJ for preliminary ruling:
The dicta of Nordsee
Opinion of AG Reischl: longevity of the well-reasoned arguments
The judgment: clear rejection, ambiguous threat?
The core of the problem

13.3.2 Indirect reference through the national courts

13.3.3 Assessment of the feasibility and desirability of granting arbitral tribunals direct or indirect access to the mechanism of preliminary procedure of Article 234 EC

13.4 The European Commission

13.4.1 Informal requests for information

13.5 Conclusion