CONTENTS

Preface xix
Table of Contributors xxi
Acknowledgments xxv

I. PRINCIPLES

MEIR DAN-COHEN

Comments:
Kyron Huigens—Duress Is Never a Conduct Rule 12
Samuel W. Buell—Decision Rules as Notice: The Case of Fraud 13
Anne M. Coughlin—Of Decision Rules and Conduct Rules, or Doing the Police in Different Voices 15
Luis Duarte d'Almeida—Separation, But Not of Rules 17
Adil Ahmad Haque—The Constitutive Function of Criminal Law 19
Eric J. Miller—Are There Two Types of Decision Rules? 20
Malcolm Thorburn—A Liberal Criminal Law Cannot Be Reduced to These Two Types of Rules 22

Reply:
Meir Dan-Cohen 24

Chapter 2. Empirical Desert 29
PAUL H. ROBINSON

Comments:
Mary Sigler—The False Promise of Empirical Desert 39
Adam J. Kolber—Compliance-Promoting Intuitions 41
Michael T. Cahill—A Fertile Desert? 43
Alice Ristroph—The New Desert 45
Youngjae Lee—Keeping Desert Honest 49
Matthew Lister—Desert: Empirical, Not Metaphysical 51
Alice Ristroph—Response to Lee and Lister 53
Joseph E. Kennedy—Empirical Desert and the Endpoints of Punishment 54
Andrew E. Taslitz—Empirical Desert: The Yin and Yang of Criminal Justice 56
CONTENTS

Jonathan S. Masur, Richard H. McAdams, and Thomas J. Miles—For General Deterrence 122

Reply:
Paul H. Robinson 124

Chapter 6. Why Only the State May Inflict Criminal Sanctions: The Case Against Privately Inflicted Sanctions 129
ALON HAREL

Comments:
Miriam Baer—Eliminating the Divide Between the State and Its Citizens 137
Doron Teichman—Why the State May Delegate the Infliction of Criminal Sanctions 139
Malcolm Thorburn—Why Only the State May Decide When Sanctions Are Appropriate 140
Stuart P. Green—Why Do Privately Inflicted Criminal Sanctions Matter? 142

Reply:
Alon Harel 144

Chapter 7. Results Don’t Matter 147
LARRY ALEXANDER AND KIMBERLY KESSLER FERZAN

Comments:
Gerald Leonard—Some Reasons Why Criminal Harms Matter 153
Peter Westen—Why Criminal Harms Matter 155
Thomas Morawetz—Results Don’t Matter, But . . . 157
Jeremy Horder—On the Reducibility of Crimes 159

Reply:
Larry Alexander and Kimberly Kessler Ferzan 160

Chapter 8. Post-Modern Meditations on Punishment: On the Limits of Reason and the Virtue of Randomization 163
BERNARD E. HARCOURT

Comments:
Alice Ristroph—Games Punishers Play 173
Michael M. O’Hear—Chance’s Domain 175
Alon Harel—The Lure of Ambivalent Skepticism 177
Ken Levy—Punishment Must Be Justified Or Not at All 179

Reply:
Bernard E. Harcourt 181
Chapter 9. Remorse, Apology, and Mercy 185

JEFFRIE G. MURPHY

Comments:
Sherry F. Colb—Retaining Remorse 195
Stephanos Bibas—Invasions of Conscience and Faked Apologies 196
Susan A. Bandes—Evaluation of Remorse Is Here to Stay:
We Should Focus on Improving Its Dynamics 198
Lisa Kern Griffin—Insincere and Involuntary Public Apologies 199
Janet Ainsworth—The Social Meaning of Apology 201

Reply:
Jeffrie G. Murphy 203

Chapter 10. Interpretive Construction in the Substantive Criminal Law 207

MARK KELMAN

Comments:
Paul Litton—Unexplained, False Assumptions Underlie Kelman’s Skepticism 218
John Mikhail—Unconscious Choices in Legal Analysis 220
Margaret Raymond—Interpretive Constructions and the Exercise of Bias 222
Alice Ristroph—Interpretive Construction and Defensive Punishment Theory 224

Reply:
Mark Kelman 226

Chapter 11. Criminalization and Sharing Wrongs 229

S.E. MARSHALL AND R.A. DUFF

Comments:
Stuart P. Green—Sharing Wrongs Between Criminal and Civil Sanctions 238
Shlomit Wallerstein—Victim, Beware! On the Dangers of Sharing Wrongs with Society 240
Adil Ahmad Haque—Sharing the Burdens of Justice 241
Matthew Lister—Contractualism and the Sharing of Wrongs 243
Michelle Madden Dempsey—Sharing Reasons for Criminalization? No Thanks . . . Already Got ‘Em! 245
Andrew E. Taslitz—Public versus Private Retribution and Delegated Revenge 247
Chapter 12. Monstrous Offenders and the Search for Solidarity Through Modern Punishment 253
JOSEPH E. KENNEDY

Comments:
Marianne Wesson—Domesticated Monsters 262
Janet Ainsworth—"We Have Met the Enemy and He Is Us": Cognitive Bias and Perceptions of Threat 264
Douglas A. Berman—Have Good Intentions Also Fueled the Severity Revolution? 266

Reply:
Joseph E. Kennedy 268

II. DOCTRINE

Chapter 13. Against Negligence Liability 273
LARRY ALEXANDER AND KIMBERLY KESSLER FERZAN

Comments:
Leo Zaibert—For Negligence Liability 281
Michelle Madden Dempsey—The Object of Criminal Responsibility 283
Alan Brudner—Is Negligence Blameless? 285
Stephen P. Garvey—Fatally Circular? Not! 286
Andrew E. Taslitz—Cognitive Science and Contextual Negligence Liability 288
Kenneth W. Simons—The Distinction Between Negligence and Recklessness Is Unstable 290

Reply:
Larry Alexander and Kimberly Kessler Ferzan 291

Chapter 14. Rape Law Reform Based on Negotiation: Beyond the No and Yes Models 295
MICHELLE J. ANDERSON

Comments:
Andrew E. Taslitz—Self-Deception and Rape Law Reform 305
Kimberly Kessler Ferzan—Sex as Contract 308
Robin Charlow—Negotiating Sex: Would It Work? 310
Sherry F. Colb—Conversation Before Penetration? 312
CONTENTS

Marianne Wesson—You Can’t Get Away from Consent 313

Reply:
Michelle J. Anderson 314

Chapter 15. Provocation: Explaining and Justifying the Defense in Partial Excuse, Loss of Self-Control Terms 319
Joshua Dressler

Comments:
Susan D. Rozelle—He Had It Coming: Provocation as a Partial Justification 326
Vera Bergelson—Provocation: Not Just a Partial Excuse 328
Marcia Baron—Reframing the Issues: Differing Views of Justification and the Feminist Critique of Provocation 329
Joan H. Krause—Tolerating the Loss of Self-Control 331
Kenneth Simons—Excuse Doctrine Should Eschew Both the Reasonable and the Ordinary Person 333
Stephen P. Garvey—Get Rid of Adequate Provocation! 335
Marianne Wesson—Enforcing Virtue with the Law of Homicide 336

Reply:
Joshua Dressler 338

Chapter 16. Objective Versus Subjective Justification: A Case Study in Function and Form in Constructing a System of Criminal Law Theory 343
Paul H. Robinson

Comments:
Peter Westen—A Platonic Justification for “Unknowing Justification” 354
Shlomit Wallerstein—The Third, Combined, Theory for Justifications 356
Mitchell N. Berman—In Defense of Subjective Justifications 357
John Mikhail—Constraining the Necessity Defense 359

Reply:
Paul H. Robinson 361

Chapter 17. Self-Defense and the Psychotic Aggressor 365
George P. Fletcher and Luis E. Chiesa

Comments:
Boaz Sangero—“Self-Defense and the Psychotic Aggressor”: What About Proportionality? 372
CONTENTS

John Mikhail—Self-Defense Against Wrongful Attack: The Case of the Psychotic Aggressor 374
Sherry F. Colb—Justifying Homicide Against Innocent Aggressors Without Denying Their Innocence 375
Shlomit Wallerstein—Two Flaws in the Autonomy-Based Justification for Self-Defense 377

Reply:
George P. Fletcher and Luis E. Chiesa 380

Chapter 18. Self-Defense Against Morally Innocent Threats 385
JEFF McMahan

Comments:
Adil Ahmad Haque—Rights and Liabilities at War 395
Shlomit Wallerstein—Why Causal Responsibility Matters 396
Kimberly Kessler Ferzan—Can’t Sue; Can Kill 398
Victor Tadros—Doubts About the Responsibility Principle 402

Reply:
Jeff McMahan 404

WHITLEY R.P. KAUFMAN

Comments:
Gideon Yaffe—The Real Link Between Imminence and Necessity 415
Marcia Baron—In Defense of the Proxy Thesis 417
Kimberly Kessler Ferzan—The Values and Costs of Imminence 419
Joan H. Krause—Imminence Reconsidered: Are Battered Women Different? 420
Jeremy Horder—The “Imminence” Requirement, Battered Women, and the Authority to Strike Back 422

Reply:
Whitley R.P. Kaufman 424
Chapter 20. Reasonable Provocation and Self-Defense:
Recognizing the Distinction Between Act Reasonableness
and Emotion Reasonableness 427
CYNTHIA LEE

Comments:
Susan D. Rozelle—Making Waves: Radicalizing
Act Reasonableness 432
Carissa Byrne Hessick—Is an Act Reasonableness
Inquiry Necessary? 434
Terry A. Maroney—Differentiating Cognitive and Volitional
Aspects of Emotion in Self-Defense and Provocation 436
Caroline Forell—Norms, Proportionality, Provocation,
and Imperfect Self-Defense 438
Jeremy Horder—Different Ways to Manifest Reasonableness 440
Kenneth W. Simons—Requiring Reasonable Beliefs
About Self-Defense Ensures that Acts Conforming to Those Beliefs Are Reasonable 441

Reply:
Cynthia Lee 443

Chapter 21. Against Control Tests for Criminal Responsibility 449
STEPHEN J. MORSE

Comments:
Stephen P. Garvey—The Folk Psychology of Self-Control 460
Michael Louis Corrado—Morse on Control Tests 461
Susan D. Rozelle—Sometimes a Control Test
Is Just a Control Test 463
Terry A. Maroney—Why Is a Folk-Psychological Account of Loss of Control Necessary (And What Precisely Is It)? 465
Robert F. Schopp—Cognition, Rationality, and Responsibility 467

Reply:
Stephen J. Morse 469

Chapter 22. Abolition of the Insanity Defense 473
CHRISTOPHER SLOBOGIN

Comments:
Susan D. Rozelle—No Excuse for You 482
Sherry F. Colb—Not By Cognition Alone 484
Paul Litton—Against Integrationism 486
Matt Matravers—Justifying Defenses 488
Reply:
Christopher Slobogin 489

Chapter 23. Entrapment and the “Free Market” for Crime 493

LOUIS MICHAEL SEIDMAN

Comments:
Sherry F. Colb—Making Sense of Entrapment Law After the Death of Lochner 503
Miriam Baer—Entrapment and the Quandary of the Undercover Investigation 505
Bruce Hay—An Enforcement Policy Perspective on Entrapment 507
Richard H. McAdams—The Entrapment Defense Defended 509

Reply:
Louis Michael Seidman 512

III. ADMINISTRATION

Chapter 24. The Political Economy of Criminal Law and Procedure: The Pessimists’ View 517

RICHARD H. MCADAMS

Comments:
Darryl K. Brown—The Enduring Pattern of Broad Criminal Codes and a Path for Structural Change 528
Samuel W. Buell—The Sources of Overbreadth 530
Joseph E. Kennedy—Why Here and Why Now? Bringing History and Sociology to Bear on Punitive Pathology 532
Andrew E. Taslitz—The Political Economy of Prosecutorial Indiscretion 533
Rachel E. Barkow—An Ounce of Prevention: Realistic Treatment for Our Pathological Politics 535
Ronald F. Wright—Prosecutor Elections and Overdepth in Criminal Codes 537

Reply:
Richard H. McAdams 539

Chapter 25. Against Jury Nullification 543

ANDREW D. LEIPOLD

Comments:
Richard H. McAdams—Jury Nullification Checks Prosecutorial Power 551
CONTENTS

Carol S. Steiker—Sculpting the Shape of Nullification Through Jury Information and Instruction 553
Sherry F. Colb—Jury Nullification and Erroneous Acquittals: Getting the Causation Backwards 554
Josh Bowers—Accuracy and Legitimacy 556

Reply:
Andrew D. Leipold 558

Chapter 26. Race-Based Jury Nullification: Black Power in the Criminal Justice System 561
PAUL BUTLER

Comments:
Lawrence Rosenthal—Confusing Cause and Effect 569
Robin Charlow—The Effect of Race-Based Jury Nullification on Batson 572
LaJuana Davis—The Pernicious Myth of Racial Jury Nullification 574
Sherry F. Colb—Rejecting Racial Jury Nullification 575
Bennett Capers—On Racially-Based Jury Nullification 576
Josh Bowers—Grand-Jury Nullification: Black Power in the Charging Decision 578

Reply:
Paul Butler 580

Chapter 27. In Support of Restorative Justice 585
ERIK LUNA

Comments:
Stephanos Bibas—Restoration, But Also More Justice 595
David Dolinko—Restorative Caveats 597
Margareth Etienne—Restoring Justice Through Individualized Processes 599
Joseph E. Kennedy—Restore to What? Supplementing Restorative Justice 601
Michael M. O’Hear—Dangers of the Big Tent 602
Robert Weisberg—Luna-Inspired Speculations on Restorative Justice 604

Reply:
Erik Luna 606
Chapter 28. The Virtues of Offense/Offender Distinctions 611
DOUGLAS A. BERMAN

Comments:
Richard E. Myers II—From Each According to His Ability 622
Adam J. Kolber—Characteristics Related to Punishment Experience 623
Nancy Gertner—Offense/Offender Distinction and Competence 625
Laura I Appleman—Splitting the Baby: The Danger of Distinguishing Between Offense and Offender Characteristics 627
Joseph E. Kennedy—Blakely, Booker, Accountability, and Intelligibility 629
Margareth Etienne—In Need of a Theory of Mitigation 630

Reply:
Douglas A. Berman 632

Chapter 29. The Heart Has Its Reasons: Examining the Strange Persistence of the American Death Penalty 635
SUSAN A. BANDES

Comments:
Douglas A. Berman and Stephanos Bibas—The Heart Has Its Value: The Death Penalty's Justifiable Persistence 643
Mary Sigler—Emotions, Retributivism and the Death Penalty 645
Jeffrie G. Murphy—When Clearly Understood, Retributive Theory Has Much To Offer 647
Robert F. Schopp—Reason and Emotion in Capital Sentencing 649
Joseph E. Kennedy—Outrage Versus Anger and Hatred 651
Carol S. Steiker—Will Empathy Kill the Death Penalty, or Vice Versa? 652
LaJuana Davis—Overriding Emotion 654
Terry A. Maroney—Can the Theory and Practice of Capital Punishment Be More Emotionally Intelligent? 656

Reply:
Susan A. Bandes 658

Chapter 30. Mercy's Decline and Administrative Law's Ascendance 663
RACHEL E. BARKOW

Comments:
Ronald F. Wright and Marc L. Miller—Subjective and Objective Discretion of Prosecutors 673
Douglas A. Berman—Mercy’s Disguise, Prosecutorial Power, and Equality’s Modern Construction 675
Stephanos Bibas—Political versus Administrative Justice 677
Andrew E. Taslitz—The Decline of Criminal Law Representative Populism 679

Reply: Rachel E. Barkow 681

Chapter 31. Criminal Law Comes Home 683

JEANNIE SUK

Comments:
Melissa Murray—The Private Life of Criminal Law 692
Laura A. Rosenbury—Whose Privacy? 694
Aya Gruber—From Neoliberalism to Libertarianism: Why Neither Criminalization Nor Privacy Is the Answer for Battered Women 696
Jennifer Collins—Criminal Law Comes Home to a Family 698
Cheryl Hanna—Because Breaking Up Is Hard To Do 700
Emily J. Sack—The Crime of Domestic Violence 702
Deborah Tuerkheimer—Domesticating Criminal Law: A Normative Defense 704
Alafair Burke—Domestic Violence Misdemeanor Prosecutions and the New Policing 705

Reply: Jeannie Suk 707

Index 713