The Constitutionalization of International Law

by

JAN KLABBERS
Professor of International Organizations Law,
University of Helsinki

ANNE PETERS
Professor of Public International Law and Constitutional Law, University of Basel

and

GEIR ULFSTEIN
Professor of International Law, University of Oslo

Oxford University Press
Table of Contents

Preface
Table of Cases
List of Abbreviations

1. Setting the Scene
Jan Klabbers
1. Introduction
2. The Plan of this Book
3. Fragmentation, Pluralization, Verticalization (and Privatization)
4. On Constitutionalization
5. A Pluralist Constitutionalism
6. Forms and Techniques
7. On Legitimacy
8. Conclusions: Towards a Legitimate Constitutional Order?

2. Institutions and Competences
Geir Ulfstein
1. Introduction
2. Organizational Framework
   2.1 Formal international organizations
   2.2 Treaty bodies
   2.3 Soft law organizations
3. Constitutional Guarantees
   3.1 Political accountability
   3.2 Rule of law
4. The Relationship between International Institutions
   4.1 The need for consistency
   4.2 Principles for organizing the relationship
   4.3 The competence to act at the external level
5. The Relationship to Member States
6. Protection of Human Rights
7. Conclusions
Table of Contents

3. Law-making and Constitutionalism

Jan Klabbers

1. Introduction ........................................... 81
2. An Infinite Variety ..................................... 85
3. Recent Theorizing ...................................... 93
4. A Functionalist Turn? ................................. 99
5. Law versus Non-law .................................. 106
6. Towards Presumptive Law ............................ 111
7. Some Outstanding Issues ............................ 122
8. Conclusions .......................................... 124

4. The International Judiciary

Geir Ulfstein

1. Introduction .......................................... 126
2. Due Process ........................................... 127
   2.1 Expertise ........................................ 128
   2.2 Independence .................................... 130
   2.3 Equal access .................................... 132
   2.4 Fair hearing ..................................... 133
3. The Need for Consistency ............................ 135
   3.1 International tribunals .......................... 135
   3.2 National courts ................................ 142
4. Democratic Control .................................... 147
   4.1 National legislator .............................. 147
   4.2 International legislator ....................... 149
5. Conclusions .......................................... 150

5. Membership in the Global Constitutional Community

Anne Peters

1. The Constitutional Community ....................... 153
2. Individuals ........................................... 157
   2.1 Primary international legal persons .......... 157
   2.2 The individual's right to have international rights 158
   2.3 Individual rights to participation: towards individuals’ law-making power 159
   2.4 Towards individualized law-enforcement .... 161
   2.5. The expansion of international human rights 167
   2.6. Beyond human rights .......................... 168
   2.7. Individuals as creditors of international responsibility 171
Table of Contents

2.8. Individual agency in the law of diplomatic protection 172
2.9. International individual obligations 174
2.10. By way of conclusion: from bourgeois to citoyens 177

3. States
3.1. States as pouvoirs constitués, not pouvoirs constituants 179
3.2. The effectiveness and legitimacy of states 180
3.3. Sovereignty 182
3.4. Equality 190
3.5. The constitutional functions of states in a constitutionalized world order 196
3.6. By way of conclusion: the domestic analogy reversed 200

4. International Organizations
4.1. Sectoral constitutionalization 201
4.2. Hybridity: treaty-constitutions 203
4.3. Constitutional principles containing member states 205
4.4. Autonomy as a proxy for sovereignty and as trigger for constitutionalist demands 208
4.5. Accountability of international organizations towards citizens 210
4.6. Rule of law and human rights responsibilities of international organizations 212
4.7. (Judicial) constitutionalization of and through adjudication 215
4.8. The constitutionalization of organizations as judicial self-empowerment 217

5. Non-governmental Organizations
5.1. Towards a principle of openness 220
5.2. A constitutionally appropriate accreditation of NGOs 222
5.3. NGO participation in international law-making: 'voice', not 'vote' 225
5.4. NGO participation in law-enforcement 227
5.5. The legitimacy and accountability of NGOs 235
5.6. By way of conclusion: NGO voice as a constitutional condition of global governance 239

6. Business Actors
6.1. The international economic constitution as a framework for business actors 240
6.2. Rendering business actors responsible 243
6.3. International partnerships, outsourcing public functions, and constitutional limits 246
6.4. International law-making with business actors 248
6.5. The enforcement of international hard and soft law by business actors 251
6.6. The legitimacy of business actors 255
6.7. The accountability of business actors 256
6.8. By way of conclusion: towards trilateral partnerships with governmental residual responsibility 258

6. Dual Democracy
Anne Peters

1. Democracy as a Principle of the Global Constitutional Order
   1.1. The duality of global democracy 264
   1.2. The meanings and merits of democracy 265
   1.3. The democratic deficits of global governance 267
   1.4. New types of democracy for the global level? 268
2. First Track: The Democratization of International Governance via Democratic Nation States
   2.1. States as democratic mediators 271
   2.2. Towards a global constitutional principle of domestic democracy 273
   2.3. Persisting problems of the statist track of democratization 286
3. Second Track: Citizenship as the Basis of a Non-state Democratization of International Governance
   3.1. Transnational citizenship 297
   3.2. 'Who speaks of humankind cheats'? 302
   3.3. Looking forward: the globalization of citizenship 307
4. Second Track: The Role of Civil Society Actors in Global Democracy
   4.1. Global civil society 313
   4.2. Democratic benefits of NGO involvement 315
5. Second Track: Institutional Design for a Non-state Democratization of Global Governance
   5.1. Transnational referendums and consultations 318
   5.2. Modes of citizens' representation 319
   5.3. Parliamentary assemblies 322
   5.4. More transparency 326
   5.5. Impracticalities of non-state democratization 330
   5.6. Practical benefits of non-state democratization 332
6. Tensions between the Two Tracks 333
7. Complementary Mechanisms of Legitimacy and Accountability 338
Table of Contents

7. Conclusions 342
   Anne Peters

   1. A Paper Tiger? 342
   2. Sneaking into Legitimacy? 344
   3. Unpacking Global Constitutionalism? 345
   4. Constitutional Pluralism 346
   5. Compensatory Constitutionalism 347
   6. Global Constitutionalism as a Hermeneutic Device 347
   7. The Problem and Promise of Politics 348
   8. Global Constitutionalism's Critical Potential 351

Bibliography 353
Index 385