I. INTRODUCTION

Chapter 1 Different Perspectives from which to Approach the Concept of Law

1. The Difference between Formal and Material Perspectives
2. Formal Perspective: The Three-dimensional Method in the Study of Law
   2.1. Structural Three-dimensionalism: The Values Plane, the Norms Plane, and the Facts Plane
   2.2. Three-dimensionalism of Principles
   2.3. Anthropological Three-dimensionalism: the Believer in the Church, the Citizen of the State, and the Individual in the Family
   2.4. Three-dimensionalism and the Theory of Knowledge
   2.5. Three-dimensionalism in Different Subject Areas of the Law
3. Material Perspective
   3.1. From the Concept of Law to the Concept of Objective Law
   3.2. From the Concept of Objective Law to the Concept of Positive Law
   3.3. From the Concept of Positive Law to the Concept of the Legal Order
   3.4. From the Concept of the Legal Order to the Concept of the Legal Norm
   3.5. From the Concept of the Legal Norm to the Concept of Statute Law
   3.6. From the Concept of Statute Law to the Concept of Regulations

II. THEORY OF THE LEGAL NORM

Chapter 2 Concept of the Legal Norm
1. Defining the Legal Norm as Compared with Other Types of Norms
   1.1. The Legal Norm and the Moral Norm
      1.1.1. Differentiating Characteristics between Law and Morality
         A) By Subject
         B) By Object
         C) By Value Judgments
         D) By Coercive or Non-coercive Character
            a) General Idea
            b) Foundation and Goal of Punishment, Punishment and Deterrents
         E) By Heteronomous or Autonomous Character
         F) By the Type of Norm

G) By the Sought-after Ends. Other Differentiating Criteria 33
   1.1.2. Relationships between Law and Morality 34
   1.2. The Legal Norm and Social Customs 34
2. Structure of the Legal Norm 37
   2.1. The Ratio 37
   2.2. The Factual Situation and the Legal Consequence. The Legal Norm as Hypothetical Judgment. The Relevance of Causality and the Relevance of Imputation 39

Chapter 3 Analytical-Linguistic Consideration of the Legal Norm, as a Prescriptive Proposition 43
1. Initial Considerations Regarding this Process of Analysis 43
2. The Concept of Proposition and how it Differs from Other Concepts 45
3. Types of Propositions. The Traditional Approach and Enrico Pattaro's Approach 46
   3.1. The Representative or Semantic Function of Language 47
   3.2. The Descriptive Function of Language 47
   3.3. The Prescriptive or Preceptive Function of Language 47
   3.4. The Emotive Function of Language. Relationship with the Expressive Function 47

Chapter 4 Classifications of the Legal Norms 49
1. Primary and Secondary Norms. Historical Criteria for Differentiation 49
   1.1. The Temporal or Neutral Criteria: The Traditional Conception 50
   1.4. The Axiological-Hierarchical Criteria: Differentiation in Constitutional Law 52
2. Other Classification Criteria for Legal Norms 52
   2.1. By Material Effectiveness 52
      2.1.1. General and Individual Norms 53
      2.1.2. Abstract and Concrete Norms 54
      2.1.3. Regular Norm, Exceptional Norm—the Privilege—and Special Norm 54
      2.1.4. Necessary and Dispositive Norms 56
      2.1.5. Complete and Incomplete Norms (Explanatory: Legal Definitions; Restrictive; and Remittible: Legal Fictions) 57
   2.2. By Effectiveness in Time: Permanent Norms, Temporary Norms, and Transitory norms 60
   2.3. By Effectiveness in Space: Universal Norms, General or Common Norms, and Particular or Local Norms 61
   2.4. The Distinction Between the Norms of Public Law and Those of Private Law 61
      2.4.1. The Distinction from the Perspective of the Legal Relationship 62
         A) By the Subjects 62
Table of Contents

a) By the Nature of the Subjects 62
b) By the Position of the Subjects 62

B) By the Object 63
C) Cicu’s Thesis 64

2.4.2. The Distinction from the Perspective of Legal Norms 65
A) By the Character of Necessary Law or Dispositive Law 65
B) By the Form of Protection 65
C) By the Status of the Legal Norm 65

2.4.3. Critical Conclusion 66

III. THEORY OF THE LEGAL ORDER 67

A) Moments or Phases in the Life of the Legal Order: The Formation, the Interpretation, and the Application 67

Chapter 5 Formation of the Legal Order: Theory of the Sources of Law 69

1. The Sources of Law 69
   1.1. Formal and Material Sources of Law 69
   1.2. De Lege Data Sources and de Lege Ferenda Sources: Their Hierarchy 72
      1.2.1. Analysis of Article 1 of the Preliminary Title of the Spanish Civil Code 72
      1.2.2. The Issue in the 1978 Spanish Constitution 73

2. Communitarian Law 74

3. Written Law as the Principal Source in the Roman-Germanic System 75
   3.1. Codification and Constitutionalism 78
   3.2. The Legality Principle 79
   3.3. The Hierarchy of the Different Types of Law in a Broad Sense 80
      3.3.1. The Constitution as a Supreme Law 80
      3.3.2. International Treaties 83
      3.3.3. Organic Laws 85
      3.3.4. Ordinary Laws 86
      3.3.5. Executive Branch Norms: Executive Orders and Legislative Decrees; Regulations 86

4. Custom as a Spontaneous Reiteration of the Acts of the People 88
   4.1. Concept and Requirements 88
   4.2. Types of Custom 93
   4.3. Proof of Custom 94

5. General Principles of Law 95
   5.1. Naturalist and Positivist Conceptions: Express and Non-Express General Positive Principles 95
   5.2. Constitutional Principles 98
   5.3. Other Classifications of Principles Based on Their Objective, Level of Generality, and Function 101

6. Case Law 102
   6.1. Diverse Understandings of the Term 102
      6.1.1. Jurisprudentia as Science—in Roman Law 102
      6.1.2. Precedent—in the Common Law System 102
2.2.3. The Christian Benignitas and the Canonical Aequitas 151
2.2.4. Equity According to the Conceptions of Medieval and Modern Writers from Continental Europe 152
2.2.5. The Concept of Anglo-American Equity 152
2.3. Equity in Continental Private Law and in Continental Public Law—Especially in Public International Law 153
2.4. Equity and General Principles of Law 155

3. Other Types of Legal Arguments 155
3.1. Arguments Based on the Ratio: A Fortiori Argument and A Contrario Argument 155
3.2. Other Legal Arguments 160
3.2.1. The A Cohærentia Argument 160
3.2.2. The Sedes Materiae Argument 160
3.2.3. The A Rubrica Argument 161
3.2.4. The Non-redundant Argument 161
3.2.5. The Ad Absurdum Argument 161
3.2.6. The Pragmatic Argument 162
3.2.7. The Argument of Authority 162
3.2.8. The Psychological Argument 162

B) Characteristics of the Legal Order: Completeness, Coherence, and Unity 165

Chapter 8 The Completeness of the Legal Order. Gaps in the Law 167
1. Principal Theories Utilized by the Legal Order's Dogma of Completeness 167
1.1. The Theory of Empty Legal Space 169
1.2. The Theory of the Exclusive General Norm 169
1.3. The Theory of the Non Liquet Prohibition 170
2. The Problem of Gaps in the Law 170
2.1. The Concept and Types of Gaps in the Law 170
2.2. The Principal Legal Means of Filling in Gaps in the Law 173
  2.2.1. Hetero-integration: Resort to Natural Law 173
  2.2.2. Self-integration 173
  2.2.3. Judicial Discretion 174

IV. THEORY OF THE LEGAL RELATIONSHIP

Chapter 15 The Legal Relationship

1. Historical Formulation of the Concept of the Legal Relationship
   - F. C. von Savigny's Elaboration of the Concept in his Work System des Heutigen römischen Rechts

2. Definition of The Legal Relationship: The Concepts of Legal Situation, Legal Act, and Legal Transaction

3. Structure of the Legal Relationship: Elements
   - 3.1. The Subject
   - 3.2. The Object
   - 3.3. The Cause

4. Content of the Legal Relationship
   - 4.1. The Legal Position of Power: Right, Potestas, and Ability
   - 4.2. The Legal Position of Duty: Burden, Submission, and Obligation

5. Types of Legal Relationships
   - 5.1. By the Determinate or Indeterminate Nature of the Passive Subject
   - 5.2. By the Object
   - 5.3. By the Content, Purpose, and Organizing Principles
   - 5.4. Other Criteria

Chapter 16 Right as a Part of the Legal Relationship

1. The Law ("Norma Agendi") – Right ("Facultas Agendi") Comparison

2. The Doctrinal Development of the Idea of Right
   - 2.1. The First Formulations in Rome and in William of Ockham (1290-1349)
   - 2.2. The Rationalist Naturalism Position. The Concept of Right in Hugo Grotius (1583-1645) and Samuel Pufendorf (1632-1694). Right as Potestas
   - 2.3. The Issue in Positivist Legal Science during the 19th Century and the First Decade of the 20th Century
     - 2.3.1. Right as the Opposite of a Duty in the Analytical Jurisprudence of John Austin (1790-1859)
     - 2.3.2. Friedrich Carl von Savigny (1779-1861) and Bernard Windscheid's (1817-1892) Theory of the Power of the Will (Willensmacht)
     - 2.3.3. Right as a Legally Protected Interest in Rudolf von Ihering (1818-1892)
     - 2.3.4. The Synthetic Approach of Georg Jellinek (1851-1911)
   - 2.4. Denial of the Reality of Rights: Jeremy Bentham (1748-1832); Hans Kelsen (1881-1973); Leon Duguit (1859-1928); North American Realism and Scandinavian Realism

3. Limits on the Exercise of Rights
   - 3.1. Abuse of Rights
     - 3.1.1. Theoretical Formulation of the Abuse of Rights Doctrine Starting from the Theory of Emulative Acts
     - 3.1.2. Positive Formulation: Article 7.2 of the Spanish Civil Code
     - 3.1.3. Case Law Formulation
