CONTENTS

Foreword page xiii
Acknowledgments xv
Table of Cases xvii
List of Abbreviations xxiii

Introduction 1

PART I: The concept of personality in international law 5

1 Notion 7

2 Conceptions 13

3 Significance 19

PART II: The conceptions of personality in international law: their origins and legal manifestations 29

4 Early doctrine and practice 31

Before Vattel: international law as an all-embracing web of laws 32

Vattel: international law as an inter-state law 35

After Vattel: pragmatic law-application, unresolved law-creation 38

5 The states-only conception 42

Basic propositions 43

Origins of the basic propositions 47

The problem of German (and Italian) statehood 48

The state as a historical fact absorbing individuals 52

Law as an expression of state will 59
Main manifestations in legal practice 64
   The Mavrommatis-formula 65
   The Jurisdiction of the Courts of Danzig Advisory Opinion 68
   The Serbian Loans statement on state contracts 73
   The direct effect of European Community law 77

6  The recognition conception 80

Basic propositions 80

Origins of the basic propositions 84
   Germany and Italy transformed 86
   The framework of the states-only conception confirmed 90
   Supplementation with a sociological perspective 93

Main manifestations in legal practice 99
   The Reparation for Injuries Advisory Opinion 99
   The international legal status of the ICRC 110
   The Holy See and the Order of Malta as international persons 115
   The Texaco/Calasiantic v. Libya award 119

7  The individualistic conception 126

Basic propositions 128

Origins of the basic propositions 133
   Interwar Europe 134
   The state as a functional entity shaped by individuals 139
   Constitutional principles as sources of law 147

Main manifestations in legal practice 154
   The Nuremberg judgment and international criminal law 154
   Civil responsibility of private parties for ius cogens violations 162
   International human rights law in the ECHR 167

8  The formal conception 173

Basic propositions 173

Origins of the basic propositions 177
   Devolution of empire and scientific method 178
   The normative view of the state 183
   Law as a formally complete system of positive norms 191
Contents

Main manifestations in legal practice 197
   The ICJ's decision in LaGrand and individual treaty rights 197
   The effect of Article 42 ICSID Convention (Amco v. Indonesia) 204

9 The actor conception 208

Basic propositions 210

Origins of the basic propositions 213
   American realism 214
   The rule-sceptic view of law 217
   The reconciliation of the normative and the actual 223

Main manifestations in legal practice 228
   The Bank for International Settlements arbitration 228
   The International Tin Council cases and beyond 233
   The award in Sandline v. Papua New Guinea 239

PART III: A framework for personality in international law 243

10 Appraisal of the conceptions and their assumptions 245

Recapitulation 245

Evaluation 248
   The state: fact vs. legal status 248
   Individual freedom: inside vs. outside the state 254
   Particular vs. general international law 257
   Effective action vs. principled justification 264

Conclusion 268

11 An individualistic and formal frame of reference 271

Basic principles 271

Implications for particular legal issues 277

Conclusion 282

Bibliography 284

Index 311