Planning Co-existence: Aboriginal Issues in Forest and Land Use Planning

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements ........................................................................................................... v

Introduction
Planning Co-Existence .................................................................................................. 1
Marc G. Stevenson and David C. Natcher

SECTION 1: CO-EXISTENCE 2010 ................................................................................. 15

Chapter One:
Alberta Government Policy, First Nations Realities: Barriers to Land Use Policy and Cumulative Impact Assessment
Jim S. Frideres and Cash Rowe ................................................................................... 17

Chapter Two:
Trust Us Again, Just One More Time: Alberta’s Land Use Framework and First Nations
Marc G. Stevenson ......................................................................................................... 39

SECTION 2: SETTING THE PLANNING STAGE FOR CO-EXISTENCE ................................. 59

Chapter Three:
Unfinished Business: The Intent of the Crown to Protect Treaty 8 Livelihood Interests (1922-1939)
Jimmie R. Webb .............................................................................................................. 61

Chapter Four:
On Vocation and Livelihood: Interpretive Principles and Guidelines for Reconciliation of Treaty 8 Rights and Interests
Jimmie R. Webb .............................................................................................................. 81

Chapter Five:
Aboriginal Rights and Aboriginal Forest Tenures: Toward ‘Reconciliation’ in British Columbia
Monique Passelac-Ross .................................................................................................. 97

Chapter Six:
Designing a New Governance Structure: Analysis of a Stellat’en Model for Implementing Forest Management Devolution in British Columbia
Eddison Lee-Johnson and Ronald Trosper ................................................................. 125
SECTION 3: PLANNING TOOLS AND CONSIDERATIONS
FOR CO-EXISTENCE .................................................................................................147

Chapter Seven:
Pikangikum Family Hunting Areas and Traplines: Customary Lands and Aboriginal Land Use Planning in Ontario’s Far North
Nathan Deutsch and Iain Davidson-Hunt ..............................................................149

Chapter Eight:
Road Rash: Ecological and Social Impacts of Road Networks on First Nations
Daniel D. Kneeshaw, Mario Larouche, Hugo Asselin,
Marie-Christine Adam, Marie Saint-Arnaud, and Gerardo Reyes ......171

Chapter Nine:
Aboriginal Land Use Mapping: What Have we Learned from 30 Years of Experience?
Stephen Wyatt, David C. Natcher, Peggy Smith, and
Jean-Francois Fortier ..........................................................................................185

Chapter Ten:
Aboriginal Values Mapping in Ontario’s Forest Management
Planning Process
Deborah McGregor ...............................................................................................199

Chapter Eleven:
First Nations’ Criteria and Indicators of Sustainable Forest Management:
A Review
M.A. (Peggy) Smith, Erin Symington, and Sarah Allen ..........................225

SECTION 4: CAPACITIES FOR CO-EXISTENCE ............................................... 265

Chapter Twelve:
Capacity for What? Aboriginal Capacity and Canada’s Natural Resource Development and Management Sectors
Marc G. Stevenson and Pamela Perreault .........................................................267

Chapter Thirteen:
Capacity-Building Moose Cree Style: Moose Cree Strategies for Becoming a Goose Hunter
Brent Kuefler, Adrian Tanner, and David C. Natcher .................................301

Conclusions:
Conversations We Need to Have and Spaces We Need to Create
Marc G. Stevenson and David C. Natcher .....................................................317

APPENDICES ........................................................................................................327
Appendix A. Notes on Authors .........................................................................329
Appendix B. List of Acronyms ........................................................................333