Livelihood and Resistance

Peasants and the Politics of Land in Peru

Gavin Smith

University of California Press
Berkeley/Los Angeles/Oxford
Contents

Preface xi
Introduction: The World of the Huasicanchinos 1

1 Forms of Struggle 11
Livelhood and Resistance 11
Cross-Disciplinary Studies of the Peasantry 18

2 Domination and Disguise: Transformations in Community Institutions 29
Community Institutions in Huasicancha 1960–1972 31
Hacienda Use of Community Institutions 36
“La Nación Huanca” 38
“El Imperio Inca” 44
The Emergence of the Highland Hacienda System 48
From estancia to hacienda; from cancha to “Pueblo de los Indios” 50
Growing Lines of Distinction 52
The Early Years of the Republic 56
Conclusion 57

3 The Growth of a Culture of Opposition 1850–1947 59
From Mobilization to Rebellion 1850–1899 61
The Pre-War Situation 61
The War and Its Aftermath 67
The Response to Hacienda Expansion 1900–1947 77
The Social Relations of Hacienda Production 1900–1920 77
The Social Relations of Petty Production 1900–1947  84
  1900 to 1920  85
  1920 to 1947  90

4 Making a Living  96

The Institutionalization of Migration  96
  Early Days  96
  The Receiving Areas from 1948 to 1960  99
  The Sending Community from 1948 to 1960  100
    The “Canchas”  102
    The “Huasis”  103
  The Variety of Enterprises Today: the Locations  104
    Huancayo  104
    Lima  105
    Huasicancha  108

5 Ghostly Figures Outside the Domain of Political Economy  112

  Victor and Juana Hinostrosa’s Domestic Enterprise  117
  Mauro and Guillermina Hinostrosa’s Domestic Enterprise  121
  Grimaldo and Angelina Pomayay’s Domestic Enterprise  127
  Eulogio and Eufresenia Ramos’s Domestic Enterprise  132
  Urbano and Paulina Llacua’s Domestic Enterprise  144

6 Commodification and Culture  155

  The Implications of Commodification and Formal Subsumption  160
  Limitations to the Commodification of Production Relations  163
  Conclusion  167

7 The Land Recuperation Campaign, 1930 to the Present  169

  Initiatives Early in the Century  171
  La Falda Invasion  174
    The National Context  174
    The Local Situation  176
  La Pampa Invasion  181
    The National Context and the Changing Local Resource Base  183
    The Local Situation  184
  La Puna Invasion  194
    The Reawakening of the Campaign  196
    The Realignment of Forces, Within and Without  198
    Political Perspectives Arising from the Heterogeneity of Enterprises  205
    The Momentum of Discourse and Increased Participation  207
    Strategy and Tactics  211
      “La Reivindicación de Nuestras Tierras”  214
  Conclusion  215
8 Class Consciousness and Culture 218

The Facets of Experience 222
The Role of Structure, Political Engagement and Discourse: an Example 229
Local Knowledge 234

Notes 237
Glossary 257
Bibliography 261
Index 273