The European Community and the Security Dilemma, 1979–92

Holly Wyatt-Walter

Foreword by Robert O’Neill

in association with
ST ANTONY’S COLLEGE
OXFORD
Contents

Foreword by Robert O’Neill ix
Acknowledgments xii
List of Abbreviations xiv

Introduction 1

Justification 1
Project focus 2
Definitions 4
The role of theory 7
Structure 10

Part I: Historical and Conceptual Aspects of Security and Integration, 1945–79

1 Past as Prologue: the Historical Relationship between Integration and Security 15

Introduction: security vacuum and economic instability 15
The Atlantic connection and US leadership 16
Economic response: the European Coal and Steel Community 19
Defense response: a European Defense Community and early lessons for the EC 21
After EDC: the 1960s and the French approach to an EC security identity 28
Economic influence needs a voice: the 1970s and European political cooperation 32
Conclusion: high politics, low politics, and the institutional divide to 1979 37

2 The Theoretical Relationship between Integration and Security 39

Introduction: theory mirrors practice 39
Pre-paths to integration: federalist and functionalist utopias meet post-war reality 40
Paths to integration in the 1950s: pluralism and neofunctionalism 42
Integration in the 1960s: the 'intergovernmental' critique 51
Theoretical enlargement in the 1970s: beyond integration to systemic theory 54
Theory and experience: security and integration prior to 1979 60
Conclusion: theoretical expectations for the period 1979–92 64

Part II: ‘Crisis in the Alliance’ and West European Responses, 1979–87

3 The Changing External Dimension: US–European Divergences 69
   Introduction and conceptual issues 69
   Economic context and structural change 71
   Strategic context and the decline of détente 80
   Transatlantic turbulence continues 93
   Conclusion: security community and changing identity 96

4 Fragmented ‘Subsystems’: the West European Response to Crisis 98
   Introduction and conceptual issues 98
   Political response: European Political Cooperation (EPC) 101
   Economic response: ‘Europe must not fall behind’ 110
   Military response: ‘a European pillar to the alliance’ 119
   Conclusion: intergovernmentalism and the new European security debate 132

Part III: Europe in Flux: Internal Integration and External Disintegration, 1987–90

5 Internal Dynamism and the Consequences of the Single European Act 137
   Introduction and conceptual issues 137
   Impact on the West European defense market 140
   Internal security: the impact of the SEA on borders 147
   Conclusion: functional limitations and the success of indirect spill-over 154
Contents

6 Changing External Dimension: the EC Takes the Lead 157

- Introduction and conceptual issues 157
- The EC lead in restructuring Eastern Europe 158
- German unification and the response of EC partners 161
- The changing nature of security: NATO's obsolescence and initial hopes for CSCE 165
- Franco-German quid pro quo and the first phase of the IGC 174
- Conclusion: Competing institutions and the EC in the lead 182

Part IV: Security Threats after the Cold War: the EC as a Security Actor? 1990–92

7Testing Times for Security Aspirations: 'the EC Must Take the Lead' 187

- Introduction and conceptual issues: the EC sets itself a test 187
- The Gulf War and lessons learned about CFSP 188
- The triangular debate heats up: member states, the Commission, and a US response 195
- Evolving national positions and NATO–EC rivalry in the approach to Maastricht 201
- The breakdown of Yugoslavia and the recognition crisis 213
- Concluding the IGC: an emerging compromise? 217
- Conclusion: the status quo looks increasingly appealing 219

8 Maastricht and the Grand Compromise 221

- Introduction and conceptual issues: the Maastricht compromise 221
- Title V: the Common Foreign and Security Policy 222
- Ratification and clarification after Maastricht 232
- Conclusion: a convergence of views 244

9 Conclusion: the EC and Security – Continuity within a Changing Relationship 246

- Empirical findings 246
- National dispositions 248
- Theoretical implications 251
- Concluding points 256
Contents

Notes
258

Bibliography
308

Index
332