Greece and the European Union: Stranger among Partners?
Introduction by the Editor

II. A Double Strategy Needed for the Reform of the Structural Policy 10
III. A Common Defense Policy Needs Common Interests and Perceptions 11
IV. The Common Foreign and Security Policy: The Capacity to Act Should Not Be Neglected When Reforms Are Introduced 12

1. Greece’s Accession to the EC and Its Economic Consequences. A Comparative View
   Heinz-Jürgen Axt

   I. The Effects of Liberalization 24
   II. Sectoral Effects of EC Membership 26
   III. Imports of Capital 27
   IV. Financial Transfers between the EC and Member States 28
   V. The Policy of Cohesion: Effects and Constraints 30
   VI. Benefits and Costs of EC Accession 32
   VII. Greece as a „Tail-Light“ of the Community 33
   VIII. Greece: A Welfare Model without a Solid Economic Basis 36
   IX. Greece: It's a Long Way to Convergence 41

2. The Implications of the Single Market for Weaker Economies – The Case of Greece
   Tassos Giannitsis

   Introduction 45

   I. Methodological Considerations 48
   II. Controversies about the Effects of the Internal Market 50
      1. The Differential Character of the 1992 Effects 51
      2. Scale Economies, Efficiency Gains, and the Potential Winners 52
      3. The Extent of the 1992 Effects 54
   III. Changing Relations to the World Market and Forms of Adjustment to Competitive Pressures 55
IV. The Competitive Position as a Determining Factor of the Single Market Effects 63
1. World Market Integration and Foreign Trade Relations 64
2. Sectoral Comparisons of Competitiveness 66
V. Mergers and Acquisitions as Repositioning Strategies in the Greek Market 71
VI. Sectoral and Horizontal Effects of the Internal Market 74
1. The Effects on Manufacturing 74
2. Sensitive Sectors and the Single Market: A Comparative Overview 77
3. Some Sectoral Cases 79
4. Fiscal Harmonization 85
5. Public Procurement 87
6. Trade Liberalization and the Impact on Foreign Investment and Technology Transfer 89
7. Competitive Pressures and the Reinforcement of Domestic R&D Activities 91
VII. The Internal Market and Key Issues for the Future 93

Heinz-Jürgen Axt

II. The 1990s: U-turn to „Europhoria“ in Greece 103
III. The Pro-European Attitude: The Economy and the Norms of Society 107
IV. Membership in the EC – a „Privilege at the End of the Cold War“ 109
V. Transfers and Security: Cornerstones of Political Union for Greece 110
VI. Greece's Aspirations and the Final Outcome of Maastricht: Structural Assistance and Cohesion 115
VII. Expectations with Regard to the Treaty in the Field of Security 118
VIII. Federalism and National Self-Interest – a Comparative View 120
IX. „Europhoria“ – Already a Phenomenon of the Past? 128
Annex 133

4. The Greek Economy after Maastricht: Policy Implications, Benefits, and Costs 135

Dimitris Moschos/Yannis Stournaras

I. Economic Policy Implications 135
1. Maastricht Convergence Criteria 135
2. The Performance of the Greek Economy in the EC: A Brief Overview 135
3. Greece in the First Stage of the EMU 137
4. Greece on the Way to the Second and Third Stages of EMU 140
II. Benefits and Costs
   1. EMU Benefits to the EC 142
   2. EMU Benefits to the Greek Economy 143
   3. EMU Costs to the Greek Economy 144
   4. Benefits and Costs to Greece from the EMU: A Bottomline Approach 150

5. National Interests on Top of the Agenda – Greece’s Role in Common Foreign and Security Policy
   Heinz-Jürgen Axt
   I. The End of the Cold War: Greece's Multidimensional Foreign Policy in Disorder 153
   II. Greece's Foreign Policy and Its Role in EPC in the Early 1980s 155
   III. The Europeanization of a Self-Willed Partner since the Mid-1980s 159
   IV. Europe as the „Haven of Security“: Expectations of the Mitsotakis Government 161
   V. Losing the Balkan „Pillar“: Greece's Foreign Policy in the Nineties 162
   VI. Conclusions: a Different Rationality in Greece 176

6. Greek Security Policy in the Perspective of the CFSP
   Yannis Valinakis
   Introduction 199
   I. The Particularities of Greek Security 200
      1. An Evolving Internal Setting 200
      2. Turkey as a Threat in the 1990s 203
      3. Balkan Instability as a Security Risk 209
   II. Alternative Models of Europeanization and Greece 213
      1. The EPU/WEU Model and the Greek Choice 214
      2. The Maastricht EU/WEU Package 218
   III. Combining Rather than Choosing: Multiple Networking for Regional Stabilization 220
      1. Weighing the EPU/WEU Against the Atlantic Model 220
      2. Multi-Institutional Networking 230

Abbreviations 241

Notes on the Contributors 243