The Origins of the Modern European State System, 1494–1618

M.S. Anderson

LONGMAN
London and New York
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>List of Maps</th>
<th>viii</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Acknowledgements</td>
<td>ix</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1. The Instruments of International Relations: Armies and Navies
   - War: part of the natural order
   - The lack of clear definitions
   - War: seldom decisive
   - Armies and recruiting
   - Artillery and fortifications
   - The legacy of the past
   - War at sea
   - Privateering and private initiative

2. The Instruments of International Relations: Trade and Finance
   - The limits of economic warfare
   - Finance and international relations
   - American silver and Spanish power
   - The rise of Dutch power

3. The Instruments of International Relations: Diplomats and Diplomacy
   - The origins of modern diplomacy
   - Eastern Europe lags behind
   - The diplomat and his problems
   - Ceremonial and precedence
   - The balance of power

4. The Birth of Valois–Habsburg Rivalry, 1494–1529
   - The preliminaries to the invasion of 1494
   - The invasion and its results
The second French invasion: Spain becomes a major player

The attack on Venice

Francis I and Charles V: the first trials of strength

New struggles: Pavia and its results

From Pavia to Cambrai

5. The Empire of Charles V and Its Enemies, 1529–59

Charles faces new tasks: infidels and heretics

New struggles but no decision, 1536–44

The struggle takes on new dimensions, 1544–47

More conflict in Italy: the imperial position in Germany collapses, 1547–52

The Habsburg inheritance, the abdication of Charles V and the Treaty of Cateau-Cambrésis, 1552–59

6. Spanish Power and Resistance To It, 1559–85

Religion and politics in a changing world

England and Scotland

The wars of religion in France

The Netherlands revolt begins

The Netherlands revolt takes root

France nullified by civil war

Spanish greatness at its height: the conquest of Portugal

Spanish progress in the Netherlands, growing disunity in France

The English challenge to Spanish power

7. Spanish Power Checked but Unbroken, 1585–1609

The turning-point?: The Armada of 1588

The crisis in France and the accession of Henry IV

The Anglo-French-Dutch war with Spain to 1598

The last stages of the struggle, 1598–1609

8. Approach to Conflict, 1609–18

German weakness and the Julich-Cleves question

The death of Henry IV: a breathing-space for Spain

The approach to the Thirty Years War.
9. The Ottomans and Europe 218
The threat from the east 218
A colossus with feet of clay 223
The Turk as outsider 228
The growing threat, 1494–1529 231
The threat at its height, 1529–66 238
The beginnings of Ottoman decline 243
Corsairs in the Mediterranean, stalemate on the Danube 248

10. Eastern and Northern Europe: The Russian Advance 252
A new power takes shape 252
The new state advances 258
The struggle for Livonia 264
Contacts with the west slowly expanding 269
Exhaustion and collapse in Russia 271

Chronology 279
For Further Reading 286
Maps 299
Index 308