IMPERIAL HISTORIES
FROM ALFONSO X
TO INCA GARCILASO:
Revisionist Myths of Reconquest and Conquest

Roberto J. González-Casanovas
University of Auckland, New Zealand

Scripta Humanistica
134

Potomac, Maryland
1997
CONTENTS

Preface

Chapter 1: Critical models of cultural historicism for Iberian history and historiography

1.1 Cultural textuality and cultural interpretation: History as context, intertext, and metatext 1

1.2 Cultural-historicist approaches to historiography: History as discourse, example, and critique 4

1.3 Cultural revisionism in historiography: From mythopoetics to ethical rhetoric 9

Chapter 2: National-imperial propaganda of the Castilian/Hispanic Reconquest

2.1 The Alfonsine historical discourse on Hispania 11

2.2 Fecho d'Espanna, fecho d'Imperio: cultural politics and poetics 12

2.3 Señorio as royal authority: History-making and history-writing 18

Chapter 3: Popular myths of the Reconquest in Alfonso X's prosified epic songs

3.1 Epic discourse in vernacular chronicles: Heroic historiography 21

3.2 National stories as historical-poetic canon: Gestas to estorias 23

3.3 Cantares de gestas as narrative example and historical authority 26

3.4 National heroes as historical exemplars: Count Fernan González 34

3.5 Epic texts and types as models for the Alfonsine chroniclers 40

Chapter 4: Chivalric and crusading revisionism in Iberian royal-aristocratic chronicles

4.1 Chivalric codes in Ibero-Christian frontier chronicles

4.1.1 Iberian transformation: history of reconquest as refoundation 43

4.1.2 Prologues: national historiography as courtly mythography 44

4.1.3 Christian restoration: story of reconquest as reconversion 55
4.2 Mirror of Christian chivalry: St. Fernando III as crusader-king
   4.2.1 Reconquest deeds: past and present 56
   4.2.2 Critical models: Alfonsine history of Iberian crusade 58
   4.2.3 Historicist model: Alfonsine history on Fernando III 59
   4.2.4 Reconquest heroes: champions and exemplars 62

Chapter 5: Heroic typology and historical authority in late-medieval Romance chronicles

5.1 National history and vernacular propaganda 64
5.2 Royal reformation in Alfonso X 65
5.3 Aristocratic adventure in Jaume I 66
5.4 Political hagiography in Joinville 68
5.5 Social prophecy in Compagni 69
5.6 Courtly chronicles and popular reception 71

Chapter 6: Discourse of changing eras in histories and stories from the Reconquest to the Conquest

6.1 Ages of expansion and discovery: Old and new frontiers 74
6.2 Historical interpretation of conquest as mission 76
6.3 New Iberian narratives about New Worlds 87

Chapter 7: Cultural-historical transition in Colón's rhetoric of quest and utopia

7.1 The cultural rhetoric of discovery 89
7.2 Colón's medieval typology of the quest 90
7.3 Colón's Renaissance myth of utopia 95
7.4 Cultural discourse as typology and mythology 100

Chapter 8: Authorial-editorial frames in reports of the Discovery and histories of the Conquest

8.1 Critical interpretations of historiographic authority:
   New and old orders for Iberia and America 102
   8.1.1 Cultural models for colonial historical authority 102
   8.1.2 Towards a critical model of colonial historicist semiotics 105
8.2 Humanist critique of (pre)history in Inca Garcilaso:
   Old and new empires in Peru and Spain 107
   8.2.1 Humanist-historicist hermeneutics of Old and New Worlds 107
   8.2.2 Historical authority, oral tradition, and textual revision 109
   8.2.3 Iberian and indigenist reception in the Inca Garcilaso 115
Chapter 9: Conquest utopias and dystopias as historical paradigm and parable: New World myth, Old World reception

9.1 Plato's vs. More's model: Historical rise/fall of empires
   9.1.1 Utopian textuality in Iberian histories of Conquest 118
   9.1.2 Utopian historiography as cultural mythography 119
9.2 New Spain and New World: Historic transformations 123
9.3 Golden Age, Promised Land: Propaganda and critique 134

Chapter 10: Revisionist histories and myths of the Iberian Reconquest and Conquest

10.1 Medieval-Renaissance Iberian historicism:
    Issues of authority, reception, revision 137
10.2 Ideology of Reconquest and Conquest:
    Discourses on civilization, mission, empire 138
10.3 Comparative models of historiography:
    Functions of narratives, myths, examples 142
10.4 Cultural-historicist models of Iberian expansion 145

Notes 147

Select Bibliography: Works Cited or Consulted

Abbreviations 170
Section 1: Editions of Texts 170
Section 2: Critical Studies 171

Appendix: Models, Texts, Chronology following 192

Table 1: Romance chroniclers' authority [chapter 5]
Tables 2A+B: Heroic typology of Fernando III [chapter 4.2]
Tables 3A+B: Colón's rhetoric of quest and utopia [chapter 7]
Tables 4A+B: Authorial frames in Conquest chronicles [chapter 8.1]
Table 5: Chronology of Reconquest and Conquest

Index 193