Rebellion in CHIAPAS

An Historical Reader

John Womack, Jr.

(The New Press
New York)
Contents

- Diocese of San Cristóbal de Las Casas: xii
- Cities, Towns, and the Villages of Chiapas's Central Highlands: xiii
- Preface: xv
- Acknowledgments: xvii

Part I: Chiapas, the Bishop of San Cristóbal, and the Zapatista Revolt

Part II: Readings

1. Las Casas and the Encomenderos of San Cristóbal: Chiapas, 1545: 63
2. Presumptuous and Arrogant Gentlemen, Poisonous Gentlewomen: San Cristóbal, 1626: 71
3. Rebellion in the Highlands: The Revolt of Cancuc, 1712: 77
8. The Church’s New Mission in a De-Christianized Continent: Bishop Ruiz in Medellín, 1968: 119
CONTENTS

12. The Proletarian Line: From Torreón to the Canyons, 1976—77 173
14. Revolutionaries from Monterrey to Chiapas: The FLN, 1980 190
15. The Diocese's Most Radical Declaration: The Plan, San Cristóbal, 1986 198
17. In Patihuitz Canyon, in the Breach, in Revolt: La Sultana, 1960—94 219
18. Governor González's Penal Code: Tuxtla Gutiérrez, 1990 227
20. ENOUGH!: The Zapatista Declaration of War, January 1, 1994 245
22. Thanks to the Zapatistas: Chamula and Its Exiles, January—February, 1994 257
23. The Zapatistas Are Indians, the Government Is Responsive: San Cristóbal, Mexico City, February 21—March 2, 1994 267
27. The First Accords: Indian Rights and Culture, San Andrés, February 1996 304
28. Marcos's Reflections: Just Another Organization or Something Truly New? La Realidad, August 1996 316
29. Organizing the Zapatista Front: Principles, Proposals, and Virtual Force, August 1997 327
32. Recognize Indian Rights and Stop the War: The Fifth Declaration, July 19, 1998 363

Permissions 371