

Russia's Place in Europe A Security Debate

edited by Kurt R. Spillmann and Andreas Wenger

With the assistance of Derek Müller and Jeronim Perović

PETER LANG

Bern • Berlin • Frankfurt a.M. • New York • Paris • Wien

Contents

Preface	9
GENERAL INTRODUCTION	11
PART I
THE DOMESTIC DIMENSION
Introduction	19
Chapter 1
Russian National Interests: The State of Discussion
By Andrey Kortunov	21
Two Approaches to National Interests	21
Domestic Interaction with Foreign Policy	25
“Westernizing” vs. “Slavophile” Understanding of National Interests	39
Foreign Policy Today — Two Agendas	44
Chapter 2
Impacts of Domestic and Regional Factors on Russia’s Foreign and Security Policy
By Tatyana Parkhalina	47
Three Schools of Thought	48
Rising Nationalism	50
The Political Paradigm	51
Economic Groups and Foreign Policy	52
The Regional Agenda	54
Chapter 3
The Myth of the “West” in Russian Political Culture and its Impact on Foreign and Security Policy
By Tatyana Yevgeneva	59
Historical Background	60
Identity Crisis in the Late Soviet Period	63
“Communists” vs. “Democrats”	65
Political Myths in Modern Russia	67
Concluding Remarks	71
A Country in Transition	71
Between Continuity and Change	73
Towards a Consensus on Russia’s National Interests	80
Foreign Policy at the Crossroads?	84

PART II

THE CIS DIMENSION

Introduction	87
Chapter 4
Reluctant Adaptation: Russia's Security Policy towards New Eastern Europe and the Baltic States
By Dmitriy Trenin	89
Discontinuities of the New Strategic Environment	90
Accepting the Finality of Independence	92
Security Alignments	95
A Different Kind of Russia?	96
Whither Russia?	97
Chapter 5
Ukrainian-Russian Relations and the Debate on NATO Enlargement
By Leonid Bilousov	101
Inherited Political Systems	102
The Legacy of Soviet Relations	103
A "Triangle" Relationship	105
The NATO Debate in Kiev's Political Elite	107
Regional Stability and NATO Enlargement	110
Chapter 6
Belarus, Russia, and a New European Security Architecture
By Anatoliy Rozanov	113
The OSCE and a Common Security Space	114
NATO Enlargement: A View from Belarus	116
Belarus-Russia: The Military Aspect of Cooperation	123
Concluding Remarks	129
CIS Priority of Russian Foreign Policy	130
Bilateral Relations	132
Relations with the Republic of Belarus	134
Russian-Ukrainian Relations	137
Post-Soviet Integration?	141

PART III

THE EUROPEAN AND GLOBAL DIMENSION

Introduction	145
Chapter 7
Soviet Security Concepts in Historical Retrospective
By Aleksey Filitov	147
Choosing the Confrontation Paradigm	148
Provoking Militarization	152
The Myth of Khrushchev's "New Thinking"	155
External Security at Any Cost	160
Chapter 8
Russian Foreign and Security Policy in its Global Dimension
By Yevgeniy Bazhanov	163
The Original Strategy and its Failure	163
The Emergence of a Modified Strategy	164
Objectives	167
Strategy	170
Conclusion	174
Chapter 9
Security Relations between Russia and the Western World
By Sergey Rogov	177
The Danger of Isolation	178
A Weak Performance in the Early 1990s	180
New Security Relations with the West	183
Economic Interaction	186
Conclusion	188
Chapter 10
Russia's Concept of a New European Security Architecture
By Igor Maximychev	191
A Continental Security System	191
NATO-Russia Relations	195
Cooperation in Europe	199