The Deliberative Practitioner
Encouraging Participatory Planning Processes

John Forester

The MIT Press
Cambridge, Massachusetts
London, England
Contents

Preface ix

Introduction: Renewing Planning Practice by Fostering Public Deliberations in an Adversarial World 1

I Deliberative Practice Reconciles Pragmatism and Vision 17

1 Listen to Stories, Learn in Practice: The Priority of Practical Judgment 19

2 Rationality, Emotional Sensitivity, and Moral Vision in Daily Planning Practice 39

II Consensus Building and Mutual Recognition Create Deliberative Opportunities 59

3 Challenges of Mediation and Deliberation in the Design Professions 61

4 Recognition and Opportunities for Deliberation in the Face of Conflict 85

III Deliberative Practice Creates Public Value 113

5 Beyond Dialogue to Transformative Learning: How Deliberative Rituals Encourage Political Judgment in Community Planning Processes 115

6 The Promise of Activist Mediation in Planning and Public Management 155

IV Participatory Planning Can Transform Public Disputes 199

7 On Not Leaving Your Pain at the Door: Political Deliberation, Critical Pragmatism, and Traumatic Histories 201
8 On the Ethics of Planning: What Profiles of Planners Can Teach Us About Practical Judgment and Moral Improvisation  221

Afterword  243
Notes  251
References  271
Index  291