The Politics of Language in the Spanish-Speaking World
From colonisation to globalisation

Clare Mar-Molinero
Contents

Acknowledgements viii

Introduction ix

PART I
Spanish as national language: conflict and hegemony 1

1 Language and nationalism 3
   Theories of nationalism 3
   Language and national identity 7
   Conclusion 16

2 The 'Castilianisation' process — the emergence of Spanish as dominant language 18
   The origins of Spanish in the Iberian Peninsula 19
   Spanish in the Americas 27
   'Espanol' or 'Castellano' 35
   Conclusion 38

3 Counter-nationalism and the other languages of the Spanish-speaking world 40
   The linguistic minority communities in Spain 41
   The 'other' languages of Latin America 53
   The triumph of Spanish 62
PART IV
Language politics in the new millennium: the outlook for Spanish 175

9 Spanish as minority language 177

The Latinos in the US 178
The language issue and Puerto Ricans 186
Conclusion 191

10 Spanish in a global era 192

Spain and Europe 195
Pan-continental movements in Latin America 199
Conclusions: Spanish as pluricentric world language 203

Notes 207
Bibliography 218
Index 231