Art and Revolution in Latin America
1910–1990

David Craven

YALE UNIVERSITY PRESS • NEW HAVEN AND LONDON
(2002)
Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Glossary of Terms and Abbreviations ix

INTRODUCTION Revolving Definitions of the Word “Revolution” 1
A History of the Word “Revolution” 6
Representations of the Modern Body Politic 14
Revolutionary Forms of Democracy 20

ONE The Mexican Revolution (1910-1940) 25
The Institutionalization of the Revolution in the 1920s 34
The Ministry of Education Murals (1923–1928) and the New Mass Politics 37
Orozco’s Murals in the Escuela Nacional Preparatoria (1926–1927) 46
Chapingo (1926) and the Palacio Nacional (1929–1935) 51
The Taller de Gráfica Popular and Estampas de la Revolución 63
Critique: the “Socialization of Art”—A Future Challenge 71

TWO The Cuban Revolution (1959-1989) 75
Cultural Policy, Public Institutions, and Dialogical Art 81
Cultural Democracy and Popular Engagement with Art 85
Autogestion and the Socialization of Art 90
Popular Culture versus Populism 92
From Cuban Pop Art through Volumen Uno (1959–1989) 94
Critique: Successes and Shortcomings on the Thirtieth Anniversary 114

THREE The Nicaraguan Revolution (1979–1990) 117
Protorevolutionary Developments prior to 1979 123
Cultural Policy in Nicaragua during the 1980s 135
Particular Artworks Exemplary of the 1980s
New Forms of Patronage and Attendant Debates in the 1980s
Contradictions in the 1980s within the Revolution

APPENDICES

A Diego Rivera, 1929: “New Plan of Study, Escuela Nacional de Artes Plásticas of Mexico”

D Interview with Ernesto Cardenal, 1983

E Interview with Gioconda Belli of the FSLN, 1990

F Interview with Nicaraguan Artists in the UNAP, 1990

Notes

Bibliographic Note

Photograph Credits

Index