Australia's ambivalence towards Asia

Politics, neo/post-colonialism, and fact/fiction

revised edition

J V D'Cruz and William Steele

Monash Asia Institute
Clayton
Contents

Foreword
The need to have inferiors and enemies
by Ashis Nandy
1

Preface
7

Post-colonial explorations ................................................................. 8
Significant other Australian voices .................................................. 11

Acknowledgements
15

Introduction
Of words and life
19

What is at issue .................................................................................. 19
Some formative elements of white Australia ...................................... 20
Of literature, linguistics, postcolonialism and post-colonialism .......... 26
A negative superiority: Self-perception of Anglo-Australians .......... 31
Chapter 1

The superiority-of-being-us: The ideology in the Anglo-ethnic gaze

The Western gaze, agency and post-colonialism

Anglo-ethnic Australian politics, liberal democracy, race relations, and education

The modern state: Liberal democracy, a partisan public culture, and the naked citizen

The privileged classes and non-privileged underclasses

The Anglo core of Australian multiculturalism, and the culturally reproductive role of schooling

Race relations, restitution, the environment, glass-ceilings and radio hate

Wanted: a treaty between equals

Australia's imperial and colonial amnesia, its militarist tradition, and impending legacies

Calling Asia home—or indulging in geographic promiscuity?

Marketing Australia in Asia: Students from abroad

Sporting scandals: Cricket, Olympics

Australian entrepreneurs abroad

Chapter 2

Representation and benchmarks: Naming and terminology

Mis/representation, and concerned Asian and Western voices

Naming and appropriating 'Asia'

Naming 'the West' and globalisation

Western 'enlightenment' in Asia

Western and non-Western perspectives on the agenda for change in Asia

How the West is One?

Terminology and forms of political culture in Asian societies
Chapter 3
Reaction and resistance: Reforming agendas

Centring one brand of morality, then claiming it is everybody’s
Civil society and NGOs
New urban elites and new social contracts
The politics of group representation in Asia
Inclusions/exclusions, and re-framing the Asian values/human rights debates
Inclusiveness in Asian thought: Not always noticed
Asian and American values survey
Exclusions in Australian liberalism: Not always noticed
Alternative approaches in human rights discourse

Chapter 4
Theoretical and cultural frames

Cultural orientations: The more concrete and the more abstract—‘But where is home?’ ‘On the continuum, stupid.’
Others within and without: Agency, individuals and groups
The cultural continuum
Strategies of resistant reading

Chapter 5
The Turtle Beach texts: Inaccuracy and distortion as means of positioning the reader

Linguistics, postcolonial studies and the fact/fiction text
The appearance and reception of the Turtle Beach texts
A synopsis of the novel Turtle Beach ............................................................... 207
The film, the book and the quasi-documentary method ........................................... 209
Language in the novel Turtle Beach: inaccuracy and metaphor .............................. 214
Ascribed characteristics and underlying metaphors ................................................. 223
Asian knowledge and feelings in Turtle Beach .................................................... 232
Minou: Asian hero or eugenicist project? ................................................................. 245

Chapter 6

The politics of Turtle Beach
259

Language and power .................................................................................................. 259
Facts, truth, and the wider world .............................................................................. 269

Chapter 7

The failure of Australian post-colonialism, at home and away
289

Australian militarism and Australia’s war-derived knowledge of Asia................. 292
Punishing ‘recalcitrance’ through clandestine activity ............................................. 299
East Timor, its aftermath, and souring relations with Australia .............................. 304
The bridge: A presumptuous metaphor .................................................................... 316
A truth and justice commission for Australia? ....................................................... 323
Asking for what is not desired, wanting what cannot be had ................................. 329
Along a winding road...possibilities ........................................................................ 334

Afterword

Australia: Stepping out, or out of step, in Asia?
by David Walker
335