Contents

List of figures ix
List of tables xi
Acknowledgements xiii

Introduction: geographies, modernity and transformations in Central and Eastern Europe xix

PART 1
Geography, modernity and Central and Eastern Europe as Marchlands 1
1 Geographical space, modernity and spatial modernity 3
2 Marches and disputed borderlands: what and where are the lands of which we speak? 15

PART 2
Spatial modernity and the Nationalist Project 31
3 The Nationalist Project: the assertion of ethnic nationality in modernity 33
4 The production of localities in nationalist modernity 45
5 The production of states and regions in nationalist modernity 60
6 The Marchlands in European and global space 82

PART 3
Spatial modernity and the Communist Project 99
7 The Communist Project: the assertion of collective development and competing global modernities 101
8 The production of localities as an experience of communist modernity 110
Contents

9  The production of the Party-state and its regions 128
10  The production of Eastern Europe in the European and global spaces of competing modernities 147

PART 4

Spatial modernity and the Neo-liberalist Project 161

11  The Neo-liberalist Project: the assertion of self-development and from geo-politics to geo-economics in global modernity? 163
12  The production of localities in transition 176
13  The production of regions in transition 201
14  The production of states in transition 226
15  The Marchlands in the production of the New Europe 249
16  Central and Eastern Europe as Marchlands in the global spatial modernity of the 1990s 276

Finally 299

References 303
Index 319