The Political Ideology of Green Parties

From the Politics of Nature to Redefining the Nature of Politics

Gayil Talshir
The Hebrew University of Jerusalem

palgrave macmillan
Contents

Acknowledgements

List of Abbreviations

Introduction: Reconceptualising ‘Ideology’?

Part I The Political and Theoretical Settings

1. The Greens: the Emergence of a Compound Collective Political Actor

Part II From Praxis to Theory: the German Greens

3. Formation: Ecological Roots of a Political Route
4. Philosophy: the Greening of the New Left
5. Discourse: New Spirituality and Ideological Conversion
6. Ideological Diversification: the Green Spectrum
7. Politics: Consolidating a Green Niche in the New Germany

Part III Ideology in Search of Politics: the British Greens

8. The British Peculiarity: non-Ideological Politics
9. ‘The Movement’: from Survivalism to Sustainability
10. Politics: Seeing Green – the Simplicity of Radical Realism
11. Coalition Building: Ideological Currents or Political Strategy?
12. Modular Ideology: a Green Caterpillar Turns into a Colourful Butterfly?

Part IV Ideology, Politics and Discursive Strategies: a Comparative Assessment

13. The Dual Reflection of Modular Ideology

Conclusion: from Politics of Nature to Redefining the Nature of Politics

Notes

Bibliography

Index