ENLIGHTENMENT AGAINST EMPIRE

Sankar Muthu
Acknowledgements

One
Introduction: Enlightenment Political Thought and the Age of Empire

Enlightenment Anti-imperialism as a Historical Anomaly
Synopsis

Two
Toward a Subversion of Noble Savagery: From Natural Humans to Cultural Humans

Noble Savagery in Montaigne's "Of Cannibals"
Lahontan's Dialogue with a Huron
New World Peoples in Rousseau's Conjectural History
Diderot and Bougainville's Voyage
Diderot's Tahiti: Appropriating and Subverting Noble Savage Theory
The New World as a Device of Social Criticism: The Overlapping and Rival Approaches of Diderot and Rousseau
The Dehumanization of Natural Humanity

Three
Diderot and the Evils of Empire: The Histoire des deux Indes

The General Will of Humanity, the Partial Incommensurability of Moeurs, and the Ethics of Crossing Borders
On the Cruelties Unleashed by Empire in the Non-European World
Trading Companies and Conquest: On Commerce and Imperial Rule
The Disastrous Effects of Empire upon Europeans
Europe: Not a Civilization Fit for Export

Four
Humanity and Culture in Kant's Politics

Humanity as Cultural Agency
Cultural Freedom and Embedded Reason
From Humanity to Personality 133
Kant's Social Criticism: The Vulnerability and Commodification of Cultural Agency 135
Humanity as Dignity 138
Noumenon as the Curtailment of Metaphysics 141
Aesthetic Humanity: The Opportunities and Injustices of 'Civilized' Sociability 144
Humanity as Cultural Agency in Political Context: Combating State Paternalism 155
Humanity as Cultural Agency in a Philosophy of History: Kant's Narrative of Hope 162

Five
Kant's Anti-imperialism: Cultural Agency and Cosmopolitan Right 172
Self-Cultivation, Pluralism, and Cultural Freedom 173
Anthropological Diversity: From Race to Collective Freedom 180
Anti-imperialism and Cosmopolitan Right 186
An Unusual Social Contract Doctrine 200

Six
Pluralism, Humanity, and Empire in Herder's Political Thought 210
Generalizations, Contingency, and Historical Judgement 212
The Flux of History 218
On the Horizons of Knowledge and Universal Standards 221
Early Thoughts on National Communities 224
'Humanity' as Philosophical Anthropology 226
Conceptualizing Human Diversity: Sedentary versus Nomadic Societies 238
Beyond Empire and toward International Justice: 'Humanity' as a Moral Ideal 247

Seven
Conclusion: The Philosophical Sources and Legacies of Enlightenment Anti-imperialism 259
Pluralizing 'the' Enlightenment 260
Universal Dignity, Cultural Agency, and Moral Incommensurability 266

Notes 285
Works Cited 325
Index 341