From the Active to the Enabling State

The Changing Role of Top Officials in European Nations

Edited by

Edward C. Page
Sidney and Beatrice Webb Professor of Public Policy
London School of Economics and Political Science, UK

and

Vincent Wright
Sometime Fellow of Nuffield College
University of Oxford, UK

palgrave
macmillan
Contents

Notes on Contributors viii

1 Introduction: From the Active to the Enabling State 1
   Edward C. Page and Vincent Wright
   When bureaucracies ruled the earth? 1
   The changing environment of bureaucracy 3
   Haemorrhaging power? 10

2 A Case of Amateurs and Professionals: The Role of the Greek Senior Civil Service 15
   Dimitri A. Sotiropoulos
   Introduction: amateurs and professionals 15
   The historical and political context of the Greek civil service 17
   The traditional role of the Greek senior civil service 19
   Changing relations with centres of power 21
   Conclusion: an assessment of the role of the senior civil service in the beginning of the twenty-first century 31

3 The Changing Role of the Austrian Civil Service: The Impact of Politicisation, Public Sector Reform, and Europeanisation 38
   Wolfgang C. Müller
   How things were: Weberian bureaucrats, the traditional social order, and early politicisation 39
   Change: the bureaucracy as political battlefield, public sector reform, and europeanisation 41
   Conclusion: more political control, more civil servants' control over less 58

4 From Incremental to Copernican Reform?: Changes to the Position and Role of Senior Civil Servants in the Belgian Federal Administration 63
   Marleen Brans and Trui Steen
   Introduction 63
   The senior civil service from the 1960s to the 1990s: no apparent change? 63
   Conclusion 77
5 Italian Democracy Under Threat?: The Spoils System in Historical Perspective 81
Paola Mattei
Autonomy, partisanship and neutrality 81
The development of autonomy 83
The onset of creeping politicisation? 89
Personalised trust: political appointment and the spectre of history 92
Conclusions 96

6 The Changing Role of the Senior Civil Service in Dutch National Government 99
Frits M. van der Meer and Jos C.N. Raadschelders
Introduction 99
External developments affecting the role of the senior civil service 100
The balance sheet 115

7 French Top Civil Servants Within Changing Configurations: From Monopolization to Contested Places and Roles? 121
Philippe Bezes and Patrick Le Lidéc
The strength of the new constitutional and political arrangements of the early Fifth Republic: the golden age of top civil servants 121
The transformations of the French state and the career patterns of top civil servants since the 1970s: solid historical trends and new paths of changes 124
Increasing ‘functionally politicized’ involvement among top civil servants in newly oriented policies 133
Patterns of an underlying crisis within the French top civil service 139
Do recent NPM-oriented reforms lead to a transformation of the French public service bargain?: top civil servants face re-differentiation and new accountability 145

8 German Officials and the Federal Policy Process: The Decline of Sectional Leadership 164
Klaus Goetz
Active policy-making revisited 164
The decline of public bureaucracy: delegitimising the civil service 167
Co-governing institutions and political control 172
New sources of policy expertise 177
Europe to the rescue? 182
Conclusion 184

9 The Changing Role of the British Senior Civil Service: Challenge and Reform 189
Charlotte Sausman and Rachel Locke
Introduction 189
The traditional British senior civil service 190
Challenge and reform after 1979 191
Discussion and conclusion: assessing the current role of the senior civil service 204

10 From Managing the State to Managing Contingencies: Changing Roles of the Senior Civil Service in Sweden 208
Jon Pierre
Back to basics: towards the ‘enabling’ state in Sweden? 211
State restructuring and the changing role of the senior civil service 216
Conclusions: from position to performance? 219

11 Conclusions: The Demystification of High Bureaucratic Office 224
Edward C. Page and Vincent Wright
The limits of path dependence 224
Bases of senior civil service power 225
Declining bases of power? 227
The demystification of high bureaucratic office 232
Demystification and its consequences 237

Index 240