A 376246

In Pursuit of Conceptual Excellence

The Evolution of British Military-Strategic Doctrine in the Post-Cold War Era, 1989–2002

Markus Mäder

PETER LANG
Bern • Berlin • Bruxelles • Frankfurt a.M. • New York • Oxford • Wien

Contents

Acknowledgements 13

Abbreviations 15

INTRODUCTION 19

PART I
THE RE-EMERGENCE OF CONVENTIONAL MILITARY POWER: SINGLE-SERVICE DOCTRINE DEVELOPMENTS, 1989–1996 43

Introduction 45

1 An Era of Cumulative Changes: The Environment Shaping Britain's Armed Forces, 1989–1996 48

1.1 Strategic Environment: The Lack of Defence Policy Guidance 49

1.2 Technological Environment: A 'Revolution in Military Expectations' 61

1.3 Social Environment: Mounting Pressure on the 'Postmodern Military' 70

2 The Capability-Based Army: Land Power Leads the Way into Doctrine Development 78

2.1 Organisational Culture: The Two Armies 79

2.2 Doctrinal Debate: From the Bagnall Reforms to Operation Granby 86

2.3 Formal Doctrine: The Manoeuvrist Approach 98

3 'Instrument of First Choice': The Emancipation of Air Power after the Gulf War 104

3.1 Organisational Culture: The Royal Air Force as the Junior Service 105

3.2 Doctrinal Debate: The Gulf War, Technology and New Constraints 112

3.3 Formal Doctrine: Strategic Air Offensive Revisited 122

4 Wider Peacekeeping: A Half-Completed Understanding of Post-Cold War Peacekeeping 129

4.1 Organisational Culture: The Legacy of Low-Intensity Operations 130

4.2 Doctrinal Debate: Justifying the Limitations of Bosnia 140

4.3 Formal Doctrine: The Concept of Wider Peacekeeping 148

5 Maritime Power Projection: A Navy for the New Strategic Environment 154

5.1 Organisational Culture: The Royal Navy as the Senior Service 155

5.2 Doctrinal Debate: Preparing a Trojan Horse for Joint Doctrine 164

5.3 Formal Doctrine: The Concept of Maritime Power Projection 168

6 Doctrine: Instrument of Service Policy and Change Management 177

PART II
CONSOLIDATION OF A POST-COLD WAR MILITARY STRATEGY: JOINT DOCTRINE DEVELOPMENTS, 1996–2002 185

Introduction 187

7 Military Transformation Rebalanced: The Environment Shaping Britain's Armed Forces, 1996–2002 190

7.1 Strategic Environment: Consolidation of a Post-Cold War Defence Policy 190

7.2 Technological Environment: The Growing 'System of Systems' 199

7.3 Social Environment: The Military's 'Right to Be Different' 204

8 Peace Enforcement: The New Rationale for Post-Cold War Crisis Interventions 211

8.1 Organisational Culture: The Changing Attitude towards Peacekeeping 212

8.2 Doctrinal Debate: Marrying Counter-Insurgency and Coercion Theory 214

8.3 Formal Doctrine: The Concept of Peace Enforcement 221

9 British Defence Doctrine: Breakthrough of a Joint Military-Strategic Doctrine 229

9.1 Organisational Culture: Jointery – The 'Purple Trend' 230

9.2 Doctrinal Debate: British Defence Doctrine and the Lessons from Kosovo 235

9.3 Formal Doctrine: The 'British Approach to Military Operations' 247

10 The 'Post-11 September' Military: Doctrine and the Rise of Asymmetric Conflict, 2001/02 259

10.1 The British Debate on Asymmetry prior to '11 September' 262

10.2 The 'New Chapter' – A Blueprint for Further Military Transformation 266

10.3 Afghanistan 2001/02 – The Merging and Blurring of Military Operations 274

11 Doctrine: Institutionalising a Culture of Innovation 285

CONCLUSION 295

BIBLIOGRAPHY 313

APPENDICES 355

A Chronology – Major Events in British Defence and Doctrinal Evolution 357

B British Doctrine Community 365

C Hierarchy of British Doctrinal Documents 367