ERIC MACGILVRAY

Reconstructing Public Reason
Acknowledgments xi
Abbreviations xv
Introduction: The Task before Us 1
   1. The Present Dilemma 1
   2. What Pragmatism Is (and Is Not) 6
   3. Overview 13

I. TOWARD A PRAGMATIC THEORY
   OF POLITICAL JUSTIFICATION

1. The Tyranny of Minimalism 21
   1. Does Justification Matter? 21
   2. The Limits of Proceduralism 25
   3. The Limits of Agonism 31
   4. Pragmatic Justification 37
   5. Beyond Minimalism 41

2. Prospectivism and “The Will to Believe” 46
   1. Scope of the Problem 46
   2. Belief and Will 52
   3. Belief and Evidence 56
   4. Belief and Context 63
   5. Pragmatism and the Will to Believe 67
3  Narrative and Moral Reasoning
   1. Narrative and Moral Experience  72
   2. Narrative and Moral Ontology  76
   3. Narrative and Evidence  81
   4. Narrative and Doubt  85
   5. Narrative and Public Discourse  90

II PRAGMATISM AND DEMOCRACY

4  Against a Second Pragmatic Acquiescence  97
   1. Acquiescent Pragmatism  97
   2. The Problem of Context  102
   3. Experience as Experiment  106
   4. Science and Democracy  112
   5. Pragmatism and Egalitarianism  116

5  Against Deweyan Democracy  121
   1. The Deweyan Revival  121
   2. The Hegelian Deposit  126
   3. Individuality and Community  131
   4. The Problem with the Public  137
   5. Dewey's Enduring Contribution  144

III POLITICAL LIBERALISM

6  Political Liberalism and the Limits of the Political  153
   1. Desiderata  153
   2. Public Justifiability  157
   3. Right and Reasonable  163
   4. Right and Good  167
   5. Public Reason and Reasonable Disagreement  172
   6. Two Difficulties  176

7  Public Reason and Public Institutions  181
   1. Embodying Public Reason  181
   2. Disagreement, Consensus, and Respect  185
   3. The Judicial Model  190
   4. Insincerity Examined  194
5. The Federal Model 198
6. Is Injustice Justifiable? 203

8 The Fact of Reasonable Pluralism 208
1. The Pluralist Narrative 208
2. Is Pluralism Necessary? 213
3. Is Pluralism Permanent? 217
4. The Fallibilist Narrative 221
5. Fallibilism without Skepticism 225
6. Legitimacy without Neutrality 230

Conclusion: Liberalism after Minimalism 235

Index 243