Sustaining the Peace in Angola: An Overview of Current Demobilisation, Disarmament and Reintegration

[João Gomes]
Table of contents

Preface 5

1. Introduction 7

2. Beyond ‘Normalization’: the Momentous Challenges of Resettlement and Return 10
   2.1 Introduction 10
   2.2 The Government’s ‘Emergency Resettlement and Return Programme’, June 2002 14
   2.3 The Norms on the Resettlement of Displaced Peoples, January 2001 16
   2.4 The PEPARRs 19
   2.5 Repatriation of Refugees 21

3. Angola’s Institutional Capabilities for DD&R: Experiences and Lessons Learned from Previous Processes 23
   3.1 The Bicesse DD&R Process 23
   3.2 The Lusaka Process 27

4. DD&R in Angola, Current State of Play 37
   4.1 The Memorandum of Understanding 37
   4.2 Quartering of UNITA Combatants and Families 39
   4.3 The Humanitarian Situation 42
   4.4 Demobilization and Integration of ex-UNITA into FAA 43
   4.5 Disarmament 44
   4.6 Return and Reintegration 48

   5.1 The Program for the Socio-Economic and Professional Reintegration of ex-UNITA Military, 23 May 2002 49
5.2 International Technical Assistance:
The World Bank and The Angola Demobilization and Reintegration Plan 52

5.3 Institutional Conflation of Displacement, Demobilization and Reintegration: the CNRSPDD 59

5.4 The Government's Social Reinsertion Support Strategy, November 2002 61

6. Final DD&R Programs and What's To Come 63

6.1 The General Demobilization and Reintegration Programme (PGDR) and the ADRP 63

6.2 Profile of Ex-Combatants 71

6.3 Socio-Economic Reintegration: from Soldiers to Civilians 73

6.4 Economic Reintegration 77

6.5 Agriculture 78

6.6 Community Works Activities 79

6.7. Training 82

6.8 Income Generating Activities 80

6.9 Implementation 83

6.10 Social Reintegration 83

6.11 Assistance to vulnerable groups 85

6.12 Information, Sensitization, Counseling and Referral Services (ISCR): 86

6.13 Institutional Responsibility 86

7. Conclusion 89

About the Authors

João Gomes Porto, PhD, joined the Africa Security Analysis Programme at the Institute for Security Studies as a senior researcher in March 2002. Prior to joining the ISS, he was a lecturer in Conflict Analysis and Resolution at the University of Reading Graduate School of European and International Studies in the UK as well as a teaching assistant at the University of Kent at Canterbury. He worked as a conflict assessment advisor with the United Nations Development Programme at the end of 2001 and as a research associate for the Agency for Co-operation and Research in Development (ACORD) in 1999-2000. João holds a PhD degree in International Conflict Analysis from the University of Kent at Canterbury.

Imogen Parsons is a PhD student at the London School of Economics, in the Department of International Relations. She is based in London but is currently undertaking a 6 month period of fieldwork in Angola, focussing on issues related to demobilisation and reintegration. She holds a Masters in Development Studies from the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS) and first class honours in Modern Languages from Cambridge University. She has previously worked in Madagascar and China and travelled extensively in Southern Africa.