The Pressure of Europeanisation

From post-communist state administrations to normal players in the EU system
1 Public administrations as key players of Europeanisation
   1.1 The countries analysed
   1.2 Europeanisation perspective and focus of the study
   1.3 EU-Europeanisation in the context of transformation
   1.4 Approach
   1.5 Overview on theses

2 Phases of Europeanisation: EU increases pressure on candidates
   2.2 Second phase (1992-1994): Europe Agreements as the backbones of institutional relations
   2.3 Third phase (1995-1997): the pre-accession strategy and the ‘accession turn’ in the relationship with the candidates
   2.4 Fourth phase (1998-2002): the period of membership negotiations and patronised Europeanisation
   2.5 Fifth phase (2003/04 onwards): post-negotiation and post-accession – a new relationship among equals?
   2.6 Conclusions

3 Uniform pressure of Europeanisation – differentiated national solutions
   3.1 Political transformation and evolving political systems
      3.1.1 System change, founding elections and constitution-making
      3.1.2 Systems of government and key features of the political systems
      3.1.3 Electoral and party systems
      3.1.4 Political membership criteria
      3.1.5 Conclusions
   3.2 Transformation of public administrations
      3.2.1 Administrative traditions and post-communist problems
         3.2.1.1 Major European politico-administrative traditions
         3.2.1.2 Administrative traditions of the CEEC-5
         3.2.1.3 Patterns of communist public administration and post-communist problems
      3.2.2 Legal frameworks and administrative reforms
         3.2.2.1 Overarching reform targets
         3.2.2.2 Legal framework and civil service acts
         3.2.2.3 Legal provisions for human resources management
         3.2.2.4 Training of staff
      3.2.3 Staffing levels
      3.2.4 Normalisation and EU-Europeanisation