Democratic Representation in Europe

Diversity, Change, and Convergence

Edited by

MAURIZIO COTTA
and HEINRICH BEST

ecpr

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Contents

List of Figures
x

List of Tables

xv

Notes on Contributors

xviii

Preface

xxii

1. Parliamentary Representatives from Early Democratization to the Age of Consolidated Democracy: National Variations and International Convergence in a Long-term Perspective

Maurizio Cotta and Heinrich Best

1.1. A long-term perspective on the democratization of Europe: political representation and the great change of European societies 1
1.2. Research bases 5
1.3. Theoretical perspectives 7
1.4. Previous findings: variations and common trends in the long-term change of European parliamentary recruitment and careers 13
1.5. Mapping differences and similarities: research questions and guidelines for this book 16
1.6. Searching for explanations 22
1.7. The plan of the book, chapters, and their contents 23

Part I. Dimensions of Variation

2. The Decline of the Nobility

Michael Rush

2.1. Introduction 29
2.2. The pre-democratic role of the nobility 33
2.3. The nobility and democratization 38
2.4. Conclusion 48

3. From Servants of the State to Elected Representatives: Public Sector Background among Members of Parliament

Maurizio Cotta and Pedro Tavares de Almeida

3.1. Preliminary remarks 51
3.2. Two perspectives for understanding the weight of the étatiste background among parliamentary elites 53
3.3. The variables and data in the DATACUBE 56
3.4. An historical trend 57
3.5. Components of the public service 59
3.6. Variations across countries 61
3.7. Variations across parties 68
3.8. Concluding remarks 74

4. Why so Few and Why so Slow? Women as Parliamentary Representatives in Europe from a Longitudinal Perspective 77
\textit{Verona Christmas-Best and Ulrik Kjær}
4.1. Introduction 77
4.2. The concept of gender parity 78
4.3. Research findings from the literature 79
4.4. Hypotheses and methods 84
4.5. Data analysis 86
4.6. Conclusion: why so slow, and why so few? Gender parity in the European Parliaments 101

5. Cultural Capital and Political Selection: Educational Backgrounds of Parliamentarians 106
\textit{Daniel Gaxie and Laurent Godmer}
5.1. Historical transformations of educational backgrounds of parliamentarians 109
5.2. The causes of the elevation of parliamentarians’ education level 123
5.3. Consequences: towards new forms of political professionalization and new channels of representation 131

\textit{Stefaan Fiers and Ineke Secker}
6.1. Introduction 136
6.2. Parties and ‘party politicians’ 137
6.3. Recruitment of party officials 139
6.4. Recruitment of party functionaries 143
6.5. The role of the parties 145
6.6. Concluding analysis and discussion 152

7. The Geographical Dimension of Parliamentary Recruitment—among Native Sons and Parachutists 160
\textit{Mogens N. Pedersen, Ulrik Kjær, and Kjell A. Eliassen}
7.1. Geography and recruitment 160
7.2. A conceptual framework 163
7.3. A micro approach 166
7.4. A quick tour of Western Europe 168
7.5. The longitudinal perspective 175
7.6. A two-country exploration: Denmark and Norway 180
7.7. Propositions for future research 187

Part II. Variations across Party Families

8. The Changing Nature and Role of European Conservative Parties in Parliamentary Institutions from 1848 to the Twenty-first Century 193
Valerie Cromwell and Luca Verzichelli

8.1. Questions, expectations, and rationale of the chapter 193
8.2. The fortunes of conservative parties within European parliaments 196
8.3. The original profile of conservative parliamentary recruitment 198
8.4. Conservative politicians in the age of ‘catch-all parties’: towards a ‘centre-right’ pattern of recruitment? 205
8.5. The recent ‘neoconservative’ elite 210
8.6. Conclusions 214

Ilkka Ruostetsaari

9.1. The liberal party family 219
9.2. The agrarian party family 223
9.3. Transformation of the agrarian parties into centre parties 226
9.4. Hypotheses 227
9.5. Education 229
9.6. Occupation 233
9.7. Political experience 241
9.8. Female representation 248
9.9. Conclusions 248

10. Christian Democratic Parliamentarians: From a Century of Multifaceted Recruitment to the Convergence within a ‘Larger Family’? 253
Luca Verzichelli

10.1. Introduction: research questions and structure of the chapter 253
10.2. The emergence of a Christian Democratic parliamentary elite: When and how? 255
10.3. Parliamentary recruitment of the European Christian democratic parties: long-term trends 265
10.4. Recent developments: new types of Christian Democratic representation? 276
10.5. Conclusion: from the multifaceted recruitment patterns of an historical party family to converging but ‘less Christian Democratic’ elites 280

11. Socialist and Communist Members of Parliament: Distinctiveness, Convergence, and Variance 284
   Gabriella Ilonszki
   11.1. Framework and hypotheses 284
   11.2. The beginning—how to be distinctive 288
   11.3. Socialists, communists, and the others 292
   11.4. Variations within the party family 309
   11.5. Conclusions 313

12. The Extreme Right 316
   Juan J. Linz, Miguel Jerez Mir, and Carmen Ortega
   12.1. Introduction: extremisms on the right 316
   12.2. From the late nineteenth century to the Second World War 322
   12.3. Post-war extremists and neo-fascists 339
   12.4. Conclusions 350

   Filippo Tronconi and Luca Verzichelli
   13.2. The impact of three ‘new’ party families within parliamentary representation in European countries 356
   13.3. How to deal with data on new parties: the small ‘N’ problem and the significance of ‘challengers’ MPs 358
   13.4. Working hypotheses and data exploration 360
   13.5. Towards a tentative interpretation 380
   13.6. Final remarks 387

Part III. Comprehensive Analyses

14. Cleavage Representation in European Parliamentary History 393
   Heinrich Best
   14.1. The cleavage concept and elite theory 393
   14.2. Research concepts and methods 397
   14.3. Elite structure and cleavage development: France in comparative perspective 401
   14.4. Strategies and dynamics of cleavage representations: a comprehensive view 413