Romania and the European Union
From marginalisation to membership

Dimitris Papadimitriou and David Phinnemore
Introduction

The dynamics of EU enlargement 1
Europeanisation, conditionality and domestic reform 10
The main arguments of the book 14

1 From isolation to incomplete rehabilitation: the politics of cautious rapprochement, 1989–1997 17

The European Community and communist Romania 18
The PHARE programme and the negotiation of the trade and cooperation agreement 20
Romania’s ‘Europe’ agreement 24
The Copenhagen criteria and the EU’s pre-accession strategy 31
The Romanian EU membership application and the Commission’s opinion 34
Conclusion 39

2 1997–2007 – from rehabilitation to accession: the struggle for a credible candidacy 40

The accession process 40
Helsinki … and Kosovo 43
Progress in negotiations: meeting the Copenhagen criteria: 2000–2002 46
Explaining Romania’s progress: open windows, rhetoric … and some piggy-backing? 51
Contents

From Copenhagen to closure: 2002–2004 54
Explaining closure 58
Onwards to membership: 2005–2007 60
Conclusion 62

3 A maturing democracy? Romania’s political system on the road to EU membership 64

1992–1996: Factionalism, shifting policies and agendas 68
1996–2000: Coalition and the Europeanisation of politics 77
2000–2004: New social democrats and a new commitment to integration 83
2004–2007: Change but consensus on Europe 87
Conclusion 90
Postscript 91

4 Stop–go economic transition: the long road to a functioning market economy 93

Communist legacies and the politics of economic gradualism 94
The failure of economic gradualism 1989–1996 97
The road to nowhere: the democratic convention in power (1996–2000) 99
Beyond the Sisyphus Curse: in search of institutional stability and good governance 104
Conclusion 106

5 Recasting the Romanian state: the challenge of good governance 108

Post-communist executive reform and coalition building 109
EU enlargement and public administration reform 111
Twinning 115
Decentralisation and regional reform 119
Conclusion 123

6 Plugging a leaky border: complying with the justice and home affairs acquis and preparing for Schengen 124

Securing the EU’s borders – the challenges for Romania 125
Contents  ix

An elusive and dynamic acquis  127
Assistance and advice  128
Conditionality and Euro-Atlantic integration  131
Progress with plugging  132
Institutional change  136
Change and challenges on Romania's borders  137
From Europeanisation to Schengen member?  139
Conclusion  140

Conclusion  142

Notes  147
Bibliography  157
Index  178