A Democratic Architecture for the Welfare State

SUB Hamburg

Victor A. Pestoff
Contents

List of figures and tables ix
Acknowledgements x

1 Making citizenship meaningful in the twenty-first century 1

PART I
Social economy actors in Scandinavia 21

2 The future of consumer cooperatives in postindustrial societies 23

3 The development and future of the social economy in Sweden 34

PART II
Major issues for the third sector and welfare state 51

4 Balancing profit and social goals in public/private partnerships 53

5 Work environment, service quality and the third sector 75

6 Consumer perspectives on the social economy and civil society 114

7 Democratizing medical and healthcare – the Japanese example 137

8 Co-production of welfare services: childcare in eight European countries 155
P ART III
Revisiting the third sector and state 177

9  Revisiting the third sector and state in democratic theory 179

10 Revisiting the third sector and state in welfare theory 220

11 Hurdles to the third sector and democratization of the welfare state 244

P ART IV
The politics of participation in European welfare states 271

12 The politics of participation in European welfare states 273

Appendix 295
References 305
Index 323