The Raiders and Writers of Cervantes' Archive
Borges, Puig, and García Márquez

PAUL KONG
City University of Hong Kong, People's Republic of China
Contents

Part 1 Archives Versus Manuscripts

1 Exploring the Archive 3
  1.1 Wordsworth: Arabian Quixote 4
  1.2 González Echevarría: Origin, Secrecy and Power 11
  1.3 Foucault: Totalization and Paralysis 14
  1.4 Derrida: Burning Evil and Violence 18

2 ‘Naturally, a Manuscript’ 23
  2.1 Melquiades’s Non-iterable Parchments 24
  2.2 A Madman’s Manuscript 26
  2.3 A Manuscript of Impertinent Curiosity 30

Part 2 Cervantes’ Archive

3 Tropelía and ‘The Dialogue of the Dogs’ 39
  3.1 Non-originating Dialogue 40
  3.2 Discourse of a Witch 44
  3.3 Allegory and Utopianism 46

4 Descent into Tropelía: Don Quixote in the Cave 51
  4.1 Tropelía in the Cave 51
  4.2 Don Quixote and Plato: Two Allegorical Caves 58
  4.3 Second Nature and Knight-Errantry 60

Part 3 Post-colonial Archives

5 Borges: Lost in the Library 65
  5.1 Funes and Paralyzing Memory 66
  5.2 Borges’s Library 74
  5.3 Eco’s Library 78

6 Puig: Dialogue with the Spider Woman 89
  6.1 Molina as Seductive Narrator 89
  6.2 Don Quixote Recast 92
  6.3 Archives Fictionalized 94

7 García Márquez: Archives and Manuscripts 101
  7.1 Cervantes Reincarnated 102
  7.2 Grotesque Body of Cervantes 106
7.3 Before the Archive 108
7.4 Solitude and Utopia 119

Part 4 Archives Go Soft

8 Archives in the Age of Technology 123

Bibliography 133
Index 141