The Pueblo Revolt and the Mythology of Conquest

An Indigenous Archaeology of Contact

Michael V. Wilcox

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA PRESS

Berkeley / Los Angeles / London
Contents

Preface xi

1. Repatriating History: Indigenous Archaeology and the Pueblo Revolt of 1680 1
   Cochiti, New Mexico
   Reversing the Terminal Narrative: Understanding the Persistence of Indigenous Traditions
   From Colonial to Postcolonial to Indigenous Archaeology
   Rethinking Acculturation and Demographic Collapse: Puebloan Resistance and Rebellion in Context
   Toward the Development of an Indigenous Archaeology
   Nondestructive Methods and Historical Materials
   Definition of Terminology
   Area of Study
   Organization of the Book

2. Creating the Invisible Indian 35
   Making a Myth out of Colonial Violence: Invoking the Black Legend
   Triumphalist Revisionism and the Birth of the Borderlands: Bandelier, Lummis, and the Boltonian Tradition
   Narrating Demographic Collapse: The Berkeley School and Disease as the Agent of Destruction
   The New Archaeology and the End of Indian Histories
   Acculturation and Culture Contact: Archaeologies of Ethnicity
3. Explaining the Persistence of Indian Cultures: Ethnicity Theory, Social Distance, and the Myth of Acculturation

Toward a Sociology of Culture: The Chicago School and the Rhodes Livingstone Institute
History, Culture, and Conflict: The RLI. and the Copper Belt Studies
Acculturation and Change: Cultural Units and the Problems of the Comparative Approach
Ethnic Groups and Boundaries
Diacritica: The Signals of Social Distance
Conflict Theories: The Source of Resistance and Change
Responses to Subordination: Assimilation and Conflict

4. The Mythologies of Conquest: Militarizing Jesus, Slavery, and Rebellion in the Spanish Borderlands

The Power of Naming: The Birth of the Spaniard and the Indian
Creating Indian and Spaniard as Social Categories
Militarizing Jesus
"Unjust, Scandalous, Irrational and Absurd": The Requerimiento, Silver, Slavery, and Rebellion on the Colonial Frontier

5. Abandonment as Social Strategy: Colonial Violence and the Pueblo Response

Language and Communication as Social Boundary
The Coronado Entrada: 1540–1542
The Chamuscado-Rodríguez Entrada: 1581–1582
The Espejo Entrada: 1582–1583
Castaño de Sosa-Morlete Entradas: 1590–1591
Permanent Colonization: The Don Juan de Oñate Entrada of 1598
Colonial Period Conflicts: New Mexico 1610–1680
Missionary Efforts: Forcible Conversion and Native Resistance
Church and State Conflicts in the 1600s
The Ethnogenesis of the Pan Indian Movement in New Mexico: Pre-revolt Movements in the Seventeenth Century
Social Violence, Mobility, and Disease: A Colonial Mythology in Need of Critical Reanalysis

6. "Seek and You Shall Find": Mobility as Social Strategy: Documenting Evidence of Contact and Revolt

Period Settlements

The Development of Pan-Puebloan Consciousness and the Revolt of 1680
Analysis and Implications: The Development and Demise of the Pan-Puebloan Movement