In the shadow of good governance

An ethnography of civil service reform in Africa

By

Gerhard Anders

BRILL

LEIDEN • BOSTON
2010
Contents

Acknowledgements vii
Glossary and abbreviations ix
Map of Malawi x

1 INTRODUCTION: UNPACKING GOOD GOVERNANCE 1
   Civil servants as implementers and “target population” 1
   The “dysfunctional” African state 3
   Good governance as technology 5
   Field sites 8
   Studying up, follow the policy 9
   Basic information about the civil service 11
   Outline 14

2 HISTORICAL BACKGROUND 15
   Banda’s rule and the “New Malawi” 16
   The results of two decades of structural adjustment 19
   The civil service – from localisation to good governance 24

3 CONSTRUCTING COUNTRY OWNERSHIP 28
   Introduction 28
   The emergence of a concept 30
   Conditionality and country ownership 34
   The normativity of numbers 40
   The discovery of the “C word” 42
   Conclusions 47

4 THE IMPLEMENTATION PROCESS 49
   Deconstructing policy implementation 49
   Retrenchment of employees made redundant 51
   The introduction of new housing allowances 55
   Increasing fragmentation of the civil service 60
   Conclusions 68

5 ERODING SALARIES AND DOING BUSINESS 70
   The African entrepreneurial spirit 70
   The meaning of having a job in the civil service 73
   “How to make ends meet” 83
   Winners and losers of economic liberalisation 89
   Conclusions 97
6 "DISTANCE SAVES ME" 99
Introduction 99
Kubwerera kumudzi 101
Education and social stratification 110
The importance of associations 111
The nature of kinship duties 115
Conclusions 120

7 THE DEMOCRATISATION OF APPROPRIATION 122
Introduction 122
"Bad politics" 124
The office mores - a parallel social and moral order 130
A "primordial public sphere" or a patchwork of moralities? 135
Conclusions 139

8 CONCLUSIONS: THE STATE IN SOCIETY 141
The paradoxical policies of the World Bank and the IMF 142
A note on theorising the postcolonial state 148

References 151
Index 163