JAPANESE-MONGOLIAN
RELATIONS,
1873–1945
FAITH, RACE AND STRATEGY

By

James Boyd
ASIA RESEARCH CENTRE
MURDOCH UNIVERSITY
Contents

Preface viii
Conventions x
Abbreviations xi
Timeline xii
Maps and Illustrations xiv

INTRODUCTION

Mongolia in Historical Context 2
Japan and Mongolia in the Modern Period 5
The Region of ‘Man-Mō’ 12
Scholarly Context 21
Argument, Sources and Approach 24
Notes 29

1. Soldiers, Adventurers and Educators: Meiji Encounters with Mongolia, 1873–1912 37

Fukushima Yasumasa and the Military Dimension of Japanese–Mongolian Relations 39
Kawashima Naniwa: Man of Action 42
Kawahara Misako: A Forgotten ‘Hero’ 45
Other Cultural Connections between Japan and Mongolia 56
Mongolia in Japanese Military, Diplomatic and Political Thinking after 1905 61
Contents

Conclusion 63
Notes 63

2. Carpe Diem?: The Manchurian-Mongolian Independence Movements, 1912–22 72
   The Geopolitical Context of the ‘Independence’ Movements 73
   The 1912 ‘Independence’ Movement 76
   Ongoing Japanese Ambitions in Mongolia, 1912–16 80
   The 1916 ‘Independence’ Movement 86
   The 1918–22 Siberian Intervention and the Pan-Mongol Movement 88
   The Japanese High Command and Mongolian Operations 93
   Mongolian Overtures to Japan 98
   Conclusion 101
   Notes 102

   The Geopolitical Context 113
   Mongolia in Japanese Bureaucratic, Political and Cultural Discourse 115
   Japanese Business and Mongolia 120
   Japanese Religious Aims in Mongolia: The Mainstream and the Fringe 123
   The Japanese Military and the Mongolian Horse 130
   Conclusion 137
   Notes 138

4. Inner Mongolia: Japanese Military Activity and its Cultural Support, 1932–45 147
   The Japanese Military in Inner Mongolia, 1932–6 149
   Japanese-Inner Mongolian Political and Diplomatic Relations, 1937–45 155
   Japanese Writers and Mongolia, 1932–45 160
   Western Writers and Mongolia, 1932–45 174
5. Cultural Diplomacy in Action: The Zenrin Kyōkai in Inner Mongolia, 1933–45

- Force versus Persuasion
- Agents of Japanese Cultural Diplomacy
- The Genesis of the Zenrin Kyōkai
- The Zenrin Kyōkai's Activities in Inner Mongolia, 1933–7
- The Zenrin Kyōkai's Activities in Japan, 1933–7
- The Kwantung Army and the Zenrin Kyōkai
- The Zenrin Kyōkai's Activities after 1937
- The Zenrin Kyōkai and the Muslims of Mengchiang
- Conclusion
- Notes

CONCLUSION

- Notes

Appendix 1: List of Key Figures

Appendix 2: List of Mongolian and Chinese Place-Names

Bibliography

Index