Re-inventing the Italian Right
Territorial politics, populism and ‘post-fascism’

Carlo Ruzza and Stefano Fella
Contents

List of illustrations xi
Series Editors' Preface xiv
Acknowledgments xviii
Abbreviations xx

1 Introduction 1
   Structure and general approach of book 6

2 Right and centre right in the post-war party system 10
   Christian democracy and the post-war centre right 11
   The MSI and the extreme right 13
   The political system of the post-war republic 16
   The decline of the old party system 19
   The foundation of the League and the re-discovery of the centre-periphery dimension 21
   The political crisis of the 1990s and the collapse of the party system 23
   Berlusconi enters the field and the right enters government 27
   The right in opposition – consolidation and radicalisation 28
   The CdL and the second Berlusconi government 31
   Re-invention and resurrection: 2006–8 38
   Conclusion 41

3 Populism and the right – an explanatory model 42
   Defining the right 43
   Dynamics related to the political system, societal factors and institutional developments 46
   Social change and its interpreters 47
   Institutional developments and emerging new political space 47
   Ideologies of the right 48
   A framework for understanding the success of the right 50
Contents

- Populism and anti-politics 51
- Methodological notes 57
- A model to study populism 60
- Conclusion 61

4 The Northern League 63

- The League in a changing political environment 64
- Elections and electorates 67
- Leadership 71
- The party organisation 75
- The party in government 77
- Ideology 80
- Frame analysis – the main ideological features of the League 85
- The politics of the enemy, immigration and ethno-populism 89
- General racism and xenophobia 96
- Language in the League’s political culture and communication strategy 98
- Conclusion 102

5 Forza Italia 104

- The foundation of Forza Italia 105
- The 1994 election 107
- The 2001 general election and the return to government 111
- Electorates 112
- Berlusconi’s populist leadership 114
- The business-firm party model 121
- A party with institutional and territorial roots? 124
- Forza Italia in government 126
- Ideology 128
- Frame analysis 129
- Anti-bureaucracy, anti-partyocracy and anti-politics 130
- Welfarism, liberalism and protectionism 132
- Security, traditional family, law and order 133
- Europe and the nation 134
- Immigration 135
- Populism and the people 136
- Conclusion 137

6 The MSI–AN 141

- Historical background 142
Elections and electorates 145
Fini's changing leadership 146
The party 149
Ideology 158
Frame analysis: continuity and change in the ideology of the AN 163
Conclusion 181

7 Sources of success of the Italian right 183
Reviewing the findings: core and peripheral elements in Italian populism 186
Mythologies of the right and their fit with the electorate 196
Convergence and divergence in populist frames: three types of right 205
The PdL and the 2008 election 208
Conclusions 213

8 Conclusion: populism and the right 214
Introduction 214
Reassessing the literature on the right 214
Explaining the success and failure of the populist right 221
The role of the media 227
Leadership, charisma and theatrical politics 228
The policies of the right and Italian society 231
Italian politics and European democracy 234

Appendix A: Election results 1994–2008 239
Appendix B: Frame analysis 240
Notes 244
Party materials 250
References 253
Index 267