The State of Māori Rights

Margaret Mutu
Contents

List of Abbreviations xii

Chapter 1: Introduction 1
Issues and events as viewed through Māori eyes
Approach based on He Whakaputanga and Te Tiriti
The underlying problem of racism in New Zealand Reoccurring issues and themes
The Waitangi Tribunal
The fiscal envelope – side-stepping the Tribunal to extinguish Treaty claims
The fisheries allocation debacle
Racism and Pākehā media
International criticism of government treatment of Māori
Loss of key leaders
Bright spots
Added references
Acknowledgements

Chapter 2: 1994-95 – The Year of the Fiscal Envelope 13
Sealord deal controversy – settling fisheries claims by removing rights
Māori electoral option – government reluctance to ensure Māori participation
The fiscal envelope debacle – unilaterally determined government policy on extinguishing Māori Treaty of Waitangi claims and rights
Māori reaction to the fiscal envelope – initial silence at the magnitude of the insult followed by firm, repeated and unanimous rejection
Waikato-Tainui Settlement – Crown-determined and a dangerous precedent
Attempts to repeat Waikato-Tainui in Te Hiku o te Ika create uproar
A bright spot – Whale Watch Kaikoura wins international acclaim
Chapter 3: 1995–96

The Taranaki Report – laying bare 155 years of Crown atrocities

The Hirangi hui – strategising for constitutional change through decolonisation and scrutinising Māori leadership qualities

Challenges to Crown-appointed Māori leaders

Nelson Mandela visits and criticises the government’s racist attitude

Arson at Takahue

... And at Taumarunui

Minister of Conservation steps in on Whanganui problems

Ngāi Tahu claims settlement negotiations recommence in the face of damaging litigation

Negotiations abandoned in Te Hiku o te Ika

Chapter 4: 1996–97

Māori success in the first MMP election ...

... Encourages racist backlash

Māori MPs as fodder for racism in the media and the House

Attacks on the pilot Aotearoa Television Network and Tuku Morgan

And what of the media coverage of scandals in high places in the Pākehā community?

Some victories in the courts and the Waitangi Tribunal

The Muriwihenua Land Report breaks new ground by considering Māori understandings of land transactions

A bright spot – Philip Tataurangi wins the Australian PGA Championship

Chapter 5: 1997–98

Great sadness at the passing of leaders

Sir Hepi Te Heuheu

Tuaiwa (Eva) Rickard

Matiu Rata

Fisheries allocation has now been in the courts for five years

Treaty land claims settlements – Whakatōhea fails, Ngāi Tahu reaches agreement

Customary fisheries negotiations fail

Chapter 6: 1998–99

Collapse of National-New Zealand First coalition weakens Māori input into government

The Hikoi of Hope – a huge protest march against poverty

Politicians bicker after floods ravage impoverished Māori communities

The Waitangi Tribunal defies the government and ...

1) ... Uses its powers to make binding recommendations

2) ... Finds that Māori own rivers
3) ... Condemns the Crown for denying Māori access to the radio spectrum Tainui successfully injuncts the Crown over Electrocorp
And the fisheries allocation debacle continues ...

Chapter 7: 1999–2000
Māori return to Labour – for now ...
Dover Samuels, Minister of Māori Affairs for a short six months
Can the PM's Cabinet Committee on Closing the Gaps really bring government departments to account for Māori deprivation and poverty?
PM's choice for Hauraki electorate easy target for right-wing ACT Party
Rest of the Māori in Parliament keep their heads down
Police shoot young Māori student – was it racially motivated?
A new Treaty Minister, a slightly different approach – but no real change
Ngāi Tahu settlement seems OK
Tainui – not so good
And the fisheries allocation debacle grinds on ...
As does the radio spectrum row ...
At long last, a constitutional debate opens – only to be closed down immediately

Chapter 8: 2000–01
Postcolonial Traumatic Stress Disorder, Māori poverty and violent offending
... And the Prime Minister bans the H-word – Holocaust ...
... So other Māori MPs duck for cover – except for Dover and Sandra ...
... But the government still abandons the 'Closing the Gaps' policy
Prime Minister under fire from Māori
Lack of governance and administrative expertise causing concern but no media scrutiny ...
... Except for Tainui
Sir Robert Mahuta
Much more respectful coverage of Pākehā commercial disasters
Successful Māori settlements overlooked by the media
Treaty of Waitangi Fisheries Commission commercially successful but the fisheries allocation debacle continues ...
Waitangi Tribunal celebrates its twenty-fifth birthday but still struggles with government indifference to its funding, findings and recommendations
Settlements
Pākaitore
Pouakani, Ngāti Ruanui, Te Uri o Hau
Māori opposition to genetic engineering
A breakthrough in local government – Māori representation on Bay of Plenty Regional Council
Chapter 9: 2001–02

Supporting Māori sovereignty is politically unsafe Local councils, not Māori, left to decide if Māori representation allowed Māori views on Māori sovereignty ... in the New Zealand Herald
Mainstream media Māori bashing
So why is the Treaty claims settlement process so chronically slow?
Kidnapping of baby Kahurautete Durie
World Trade Center bombing – Māori perspectives
New Zealand Herald turns its sights on Māori Television
Tariana Turia not afraid to take on mainstream media
Te Tangata Wha Rawa o Wēneti: The Māori Merchant of Venice, a stunning performance MAI FM tops the ratings
Prime Minister apologises to Chinese and to Samoans – but not to Māori And there's heaps to apologise for Attacks on Māori make MPs of Māori descent reluctant to publicly support their own
July general election sees a record twenty MPs of Māori descent in Parliament

Chapter 10: 2002–03 – The Year the Crown Declared War over the Foreshore and Seabed

Record number of Māori MPs but only two in cabinet ...
... And only two outspoken in their support of Māori National Party attacking Māori from every possible angle
Māori objections to replacement of Privy Council ignored
Media attacks on Māori Television finally halted
Bullyboy tactics employed in the continuing fisheries allocation debacle
Local Government Act stripped of the ability to ensure Māori participation Mainstream media discrimination against Māori MPs continues
New Zealand Herald columnist attacks mainstream media Māori bashing
Whale Rider attracts critical acclaim
Two Treaty settlements this year
Government angry at Tribunal for its findings in favour of Māori for petroleum ...
... And the Court of Appeal for doing the same for the foreshore and seabed ...
... So Crown proposes confiscation of Māori land in the foreshore and seabed on a massive scale
Government clashes with Māori over aquaculture
Chapter 11: 2003–04 – The Year of the Battle for the Foreshore and Seabed

Māori react very strongly to government announcement of proposed confiscation of foreshore and seabed

Māori opposition highly organised – government steps up anti-Māori propaganda campaign – Tariana Turia resigns

Government refuses to listen to Māori and continues pushing through legislation

Court of Appeal’s decision in Malborough case upholds Māori rights

Foreshore and seabed legislation removes Māori rights while preserving non-Māori rights – a declaration of war

Reality of Māori marginalisation – Māori MPs bow to Labour pressure and betray their constituents

Pākehā racism unashamedly displayed

National Party leader exploits racism – Brash’s Orewa speech

National Party Māori bashing gives government excuse to cut funding for Māori programmes

Māori Television, now finally launched, helps in the battle against foreshore and seabed legislation

A national Māori collective to fight the foreshore and seabed legislation – Te Ope Mana a Tai Waitangi Tribunal upholds country-wide claims against foreshore and seabed policy ...

... And the government ignores the Tribunal, yet again ...

... And the Prime Minister breaks even more fundamental constitutional rules and attacks a Māori judge

Last resort: a 50,000-strong protest march – the Hikoi

Prime Minister calls marchers ‘haters and wreckers’ and says she prefers the company of sheep

Chapter 12: 2004–06

Legislative confiscation of the foreshore and seabed continues to gnaw at Māori and the country

Attorney-General admits Foreshore and Seabed Act discriminates against Māori but ...

United Nations ČERD criticises Foreshore and Seabed Act

Damning Report of United Nations Special Rapporteur a wake-up call for New Zealand government

- On the Foreshore and Seabed Act
- On constitutional issues
- On human rights and the Waitangi Tribunal
- On Treaty settlements
- On education
- On culture
- On social policy
- On international indigenous rights
- On civil society
Māori welcome report as blueprint for reinstating Māori rights – government condemns it then ignores it On the existence of so-called Māori privilege – ‘he had not been presented with any evidence to that effect’ Māori tertiary education institutions under attack – for being too successful
Looking for the bright spots – the Māori Party
Māori Party wipes out the Māori MP stereotype
Michael Campbell, Ngāti Ruanui and Ngā Rauru – golf champion extraordinaire
Robert Hewitt – miraculous survival with the help of his ancestors
Peter Loughlin, Ngāti Tūwharetoa – fashion designer par excellence

Chapter 13: 2006–07
More great sadness at passing of leaders
  Dame Te Atairangikaahu
  Emeritus Professor Sir Hugh Kāwharu
  Don Selwyn
Māori-government tensions persist; Māori protest continues but with more effective support
Treaty of Waitangi claims ongoing source of tension
The loathed fiscal envelope settlement policy remains to extinguish Māori Treaty claims
Yet settlements are proceeding nevertheless Ngāti Mutunga Settlement Act
  Te Roroa Claims Settlement Bill
  Ngāti Whātau ki Ōrākei Agreement in Principle
  Te Arawa Lakes Settlement Act
Central North Island forest settlements run into major problems as the Crown makes itself a beneficiary of the settlement Ngāti Kahu gives up on the settlement process and repossesses its lands

Chapter 14: 2007–08 – The Year of Contrasts: Terror Raids and a Courageous New Treaty Settlements Minister Terror raids on Tūhoe
Raids a chilling reminder of previous government invasions of Tūhoe
Raids a disguise for a fishing expedition?
Prime Minister and Commissioner of Police violate rules of sub judice; Solicitor-General refuses to allow prosecution for terrorism; evidence leaked to unscrupulous media Māori Party comes to defence of Tūhoe; UN asks for an explanation
New Zealand votes against the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples
Waitangi Tribunal criticises government Treaty settlement policy
  – yet again
Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance becomes Treaty settlements Minister Mauao returned to its rightful owners – but not really Government abandons its settlement policy to reach agreement on settling Ngāti Kahu's claims
Loss of several Māori icons
  Syd Jackson
  Archbishop Whakahuihui Vercoe
  Hone Tūwhare
  Barry Barclay
Commemorations for thirty-year anniversaries of Raglan and Takaparawhau Commemorations at Waitangi peaceful yet again
Victoria Cross awarded to Corporal Willie Apiata

Chapter 15: 2008-09 – A Year of More Good News than Bad
Māori Party wins five seats and receives mandate to become part of the government
Agreement between Māori Party and National covers major issues for Māori
Two Māori Party ministers
Prime Minister agrees to Māori flag but not to Māori seats on Auckland super city Treaty claims settlements proceed apace …
  Taranaki Whānui ki Te Upoko o Te Ika Deed of Settlement
  Atihau-Whanganui Incorporation Agreement
  Waikato River Deed of Settlement
  Ngāti Kahu Agreement in Principle
  Hauraki and South Island Commercial Aquaculture Settlement
  Ngāti Porou Agreement
Reminder for the Prime Minister that settlements still unjust and unfair

Appendix 1: The Declaration of Independence 1835
Appendix 2: The Treaty of Waitangi 1840
Glossary
References
Index