

A/574528

Islam, Security and Television News

Christopher Flood

*Emeritus Professor, School of Politics
University of Surrey, UK*

Stephen Hutchings

*Professor of Russian Studies
School of Languages, Linguistics and Cultures,
University of Manchester, UK*

Galina Miazhevich

Gorbachev Research Fellow in Global Media, Christ Church, University of Oxford, UK

and

Henri C. Nickels

*Programme Manager Research – Social Sciences,
European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, Vienna*

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

List of Figures and Tables	viii
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
The research context	5
The countries and the broadcasters	8
Questions of method and purpose	12
Coda	17
Part I The Broad View: Patterns and Preoccupations
Preface to Part I	21
1 The Political Context: International and Domestic Security Concerns	25
The foreign policy dimension	26
The domestic security dimension	33
Spillover to immigration and integration	40
Conclusion	51
2 The Ten O'Clock News : Anxious Attention	53
Patterns of representation	56
Fighting the good fight?	62
On the home front	72
Conclusion	77
3 The Journal de Vingt Heures : A Degree of Detachment	79
Patterns of coverage	81
France as an international actor	86
Questions of rights, freedoms and security	92
Conclusion	99
4 Vremia : Compliance and Complicity	102
Overview of Islam coverage	103
Foreign policy and international events	110

Reporting unrest: criminalization and dissimulation	118
Pacification and normalization	123
Conclusion	126
Part II The Close-Up View: Significant Differences
Preface to Part II	131
5 'Islamic Extremism' and the Brokering of Consensus	136
Introduction	136
Hegemony as conflict	137
Case studies	140
Conclusions	161
6 Television Genre and Islamist Terror	163
Terror, genre, representation	163
Genre as organizing principle	165
Aims and methods	166
Emergent types	167
Terror incident, legal story, counterterrorism report: attributes	168
Ten O'Clock News : case studies	175
Journal de Vingt Heures : case studies	180
Vremia : case studies	185
Conclusions	189
7 The War on Terror as Intercultural Flow	192
Introduction: from glocalization to the semiotics of intercultural dialogue	192
The implications of intercultural flow: from cross-cultural comparison to synchronic cross-section	195
Pinpointing the traces of the flow	197
Case 1: French and Russian reports on Glasgow/London	199
Case 2: British and Russian reports on the North African bombings, April 2007	203
Case 3: French/British/Russian coverage of the German terror alert, 5 September 2007	205
Case 4: Russian coverage of the Moscow alert, January 2007	208
Case 5: British/Russian coverage of the Litvinenko scandal, November 2006–July 2007	209
Conclusions	214

8 Commemorating 9/11: The Struggle for the Universal	217
Introduction: commemoration and comparison	217
Commemoration narratives and the struggle for the universal	219
Conclusions: commemoration, comparison and the cosmopolitan	239
Conclusion	243
Key findings	244
Overarching themes and central thesis	254
Interdisciplinarity: a creative tension	256
Transnationalizing the national	257
Television news: data or text(s)?	258
The obtruding subject	263
The missing audience and the all-too-present image	265
The elusive object	266
Future directions	267
Bibliography	270
Index	289