The Slave in European Art
From Renaissance Trophy to Abolitionist Emblem

Edited by Elizabeth McGrath and Jean Michel Massing

The Warburg Institute – Nino Aragno Editore
London – Turin 2012
Table of Contents

vii Contributors

ix Preface

I. Introduction: Reality and Metaphor

3 Caryatids, Page Boys, and African Fetters. Themes of Slavery in European Art
   Elizabeth McGrath

39 Allegory and Ambiguity in Michelangelo’s ‘Slaves’
   Charles Robertson

63 L’Esclavage comme métaphore religieuse dans l'iconographie de l'ordre des Trinitaires
   Jean-Luc Liez

II. Galley Slaves and Moorish Captives

85 The Iconography of Mediterranean Slavery in the Seventeenth Century
   Jean Michel Massing

121 Messina 1535 to Lepanto 1571. Vasari, Borghini and the Imagery of Moors, Barbarians and Turks
   Rick Scorza

165 From Borgo Pinti to Doccia: The Afterlife of Pietro Tacca’s Moors for Livorno
   Anthea Brook

III. Europe, the Americas and the Slave Trade

195 The Urban Slave in Spain and New Spain
   Carmen Fracchia

217 Black slavery and the ‘Mulatto Escape Hatch’ in the Brazilian Ensembles of Frans Post and Albert Eckhout
   Ernst van den Boogaart
253 Becoming Human. The Iconography of Black Slavery in French, British and Dutch Book Illustrations c. 1600–c. 1800
Elmer Kolfin

IV. Abolitionism and its Critics

297 George Morland’s ‘Slave Trade’ and ‘African Hospitality’: Slavery, Sentiment and the Limits of the Abolitionist Image
Meredith Gamer

321 ‘They are a Happy People’: Some Newly Identified Pro-Slavery Caricatures from the Age of Abolition
David Bindman

333 Abolitionists, African Diplomats and ‘the Black Joke’ in George Cruikshank’s The New Union Club
Temi Odumosu

361 Plates

379 Index