CONDUCTING TERRORISM FIELD RESEARCH

A guide

Edited by Adam Dolnik
CONTENTS

Contributors ix

1 Introduction – The need for field research on terrorism 1
   Adam Dolnik

PART I 13

2 Interviewing government and official sources – An introductory guide 15
   Lindsay Clutterbuck and Richard Warnes

3 Learning from the “Dark Side” – Identifying, accessing and interviewing illicit non-state actors 26
   Michael Kenney

4 Research challenges involved in field study on terrorism in the Middle East 46
   Magnus Ranstorp

PART II 63

5 Field research – Argentina in comparative perspective 65
   Maria Rasmussen
6 Conversing with the adversary — Interviewing Palestinian suicide bombers and their dispatchers in Israeli prisons
   Yoram Schweitzer

7 Face to face with my case study
   Laila Bokhari

8 Conducting field research on terrorism in Iraq
   Michael Knights

9 A practical guide to research on terrorism in the North Caucasus
   Cerwyn Moore

10 Conducting terrorism fieldwork on a shoestring budget — Researching suicide terrorism in the Israeli–Palestinian conflict
    Rashmi Singh

11 Researching militant groups in Southeast Asia
    Zachary Abuza

12 Conducting field research on terrorism in Northern Ireland
    Kacper Rekawek

PART III

13 Interviewing the terrorists — Reflections on fieldwork and implications for psychological research
    John Horgan

14 Professionalizing high-risk field research in academia
    Michael Taarnby

15 Up close and personal — Conducting field research on terrorism in conflict zones
    Adam Dolnik

Index