PART I  INTELLIGENCE STUDIES:
AN INTRODUCTION   1

Introduction   1

1. Intelligence as Threats and Reassurance   7

MICHAEL HERMAN
A British scholar discusses the dynamics of intelligence between the two Cold War superpowers: the United States and the Soviet Union.

2. The Evolution of the U.S.
Intelligence Community—An Historical Overview   24

PHYLLIS PROVOST MCNEIL
Written by an Aspin-Brown Commission staff member, this history of the U.S. intelligence community traces how today’s intelligence institutions, while shaped by the Cold War, are based on an American tradition of supporting foreign and defense policy with clandestinely acquired information.

3. Intelligence and the Second Bush Administration   42

ADMIRAL STANSFIELD TURNER
A former U.S. intelligence chief examines the state of spying during the turbulent years of President George W. Bush.

4. Intelligence since 9/11   54

R. GERALD HUGHES
AND KRISTAN STODDART
Two authors based in Wales describe the key intelligence debates in the aftermath of the terrorist attack against the United States on September 11, 2001.

PART II  INTELLIGENCE
COLLECTION   73

Introduction   73

5. The Intelligence Cycle   81

ARTHUR S. HULNICK
A former CIA officer explores the problems with using the theoretical construct of an “intelligence cycle” to understand how information travels from the field to the White House.
6. Technology and Intelligence 93
   MICHAEL WARNER
   This article focuses on the influence of technological innovation on intelligence operations.

7. Human Source Intelligence 107
   FREDERICK P. HITZ
   This selection examines the value of classic espionage involving human agents.

8. Open-Source Intelligence 120
   STEPHEN C. MERCADO
   A CIA officer examines the importance of turning to public sources of information for understanding international affairs.

9. Pearl Harbor and 9/11 130
   JAMES J. WIRTZ
   The book's co-editor provides comparison of the intelligence collection failures that preceded the two worst attacks against the United States in the modern era.

PART III INTELLIGENCE ANALYSIS 135

10. Analysis, War, and Decision: Why Intelligence Failures Are Inevitable 141
    RICHARD K. BETTS
    Betts offers a compelling explanation of not only why intelligence failures are inevitable but also the myriad challenges that analysts must overcome to offer useful estimates of future events.

11. A Policymaker's Perspective on Intelligence Analysis 158
    ROBERT D. BLACKWILL AND JACK DAVIS
    This chapter provides the reader a glimpse into the relationship between a key policymaker and intelligence analysts as they interact.

12. The Challenges of Intelligence Analysis 166
    WILLIAM M. NOLTE
    An experienced intelligence officer examines the difficulties of intelligence analysis in an uncertain global environment.

PART IV INTELLIGENCE AND THE POLICYMAKER 177

13. Intelligence Analysts and Policymakers 183
    JACK DAVIS
    In this introduction to the role played by intelligence in shaping policy decisions, a seasoned analyst suggests that many things can influence the making of policy in peacetime and war, not just information.

14. Tribal Tongues: Intelligence Consumers, Intelligence Producers 197
    MARK M. LOWENTHAL
    Lowenthal suggests that the different bureaucratic cultures of the policymaking and intelligence communities often form a significant barrier to a close relationship between the consumers and producers of intelligence.

15. The Need for Policy Guidance 206
    ASPIN-BROWN COMMISSION
    Among the many thoughtful recommendations of the Aspin-Brown Commission were several related to the improvement of relationships between the consumers and the producers of intelligence, which are outlined in this chapter.

PART V THE DANGER OF INTELLIGENCE POLITICIZATION 211

16. The Intelligence-Policy Nexus 215
    JAMES J. WIRTZ
    This piece examines the influences that drive intelligence analysts and policymakers to collaborate, raising the question of how closely the two groups should be associated as the United States makes foreign policy and security decisions.
17. Public Intelligence 223
GLENN HASTEDT
This chapter explores the role of leaks in the federal government—the unauthorized disclosure of information that sometimes occurs as part of the battle over policy advocacy in Washington, D.C.

PART VI COVERT ACTION 237
Introduction 237
18. Covert Action in Chile, 1970 247
MICHAEL GROW
An Ohio University historian examines one of the most well-known cases of CIA secret intervention abroad.

19. Covert Action: Swampland of American Foreign Policy 265
SENATOR FRANK CHURCH
The Chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee that investigated intelligence abuses in 1975–76 finds, in the excesses of the CIA abroad, the symptoms of an illusion of American omnipotence that entrapped and enthralled the nation’s presidents throughout the Cold War.

20. Covert Action Can Be Just 270
JAMES A. BARRY
Exploring the use of covert action from the point of view of just-war theory, Barry establishes benchmarks for judging the morality of this controversial form of secret foreign policy. He eschews highly invasive operations but advances an ethical justification for certain forms of covert action.

21. Covert Action, Pentagon Style 280
JENNIFER D. KIBBE
This essay explores the entry of a new player in the domain of covert action: the Department of Defense.

22. Assassination as an Instrument of American Foreign Policy 292
BRUCE D. BERKOWITZ
This piece probes the morality and the practicality of murder as a CIA activity.

PART VII COUNTERINTELLIGENCE 297
Introduction 297
23. The Challenges of Counterintelligence 305
PAUL J. REDMOND
A former Chief of CIA Counterintelligence discusses the problems associated with protecting the United States against hostile intelligence services and other adversaries.

24. Cold War Spies: Why They Spied and How They Got Caught 317
STAN A. TAYLOR AND DANIEL SNOW
Why do some people commit treason against their own country? Taylor and Snow examine this question and find that the answer is simple enough: for money.

25. Treachery Inside the CIA 328
SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE
The Senate intelligence oversight committee reports on the Ames counterintelligence failure, the most significant act of treachery inside the CIA since its founding in 1947.

26. Counterintelligence, Perception, and Deception 341
ROBERT JERVIS
Jervis explains why counterintelligence has often had a low priority in national security leaders’ planning, even though a nation’s espionage success depends on it being taken with utmost seriousness.

PART VIII ACCOUNTABILITY AND CIVIL LIBERTIES 349
Introduction 349
27. Intelligence: Welcome to the American Government 357
GREGORY F. TREVERTON
Treverton explores the merits of viewing intelligence organizations as a regular part of America’s government, subject to constitutional safeguards.
28. Unleashing the Rogue Elephant: September 11 and Letting the CIA Be the CIA 378
FREDERICK P. HITZ
In hopes of maintaining accountability without stifling the effectiveness of intelligence officers, intelligence reformers and anti-reformers have debated the proper level of supervision of the CIA. Hitz argues that the leash on the CIA is too tight and suggests how to improve effectiveness without eroding civil liberties.

29. Intelligence and the Rise of Judicial Accountability 386
FREDERIC F. MANGET
The judicial branch of government is a latecomer to the world of intelligence, but, as Manget notes, it is now very much a part of that world as the courts provide yet another check on intelligence abuse.

30. Congressional Supervision of America’s Secret Agencies: The Experience and Legacy of the Church Committee 401
LOCH K. JOHNSON
A former assistant to Senator Frank Church, who led the Senate inquiry into alleged CIA abuses of power in 1975, Johnson reviews the experiences of that investigation and gauges the contributions made by the Church Committee.

31. Warrantless Wiretaps 415
YALE UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW SYMPOSIUM (ALAN DERSHOWITZ, SENATOR CONRAD BURNS, JOHN J. DONOHUE, DAVID B. RIVKIN, JR., DAKOTA RUDESILL, STEPHEN A. VADEN, AND LOCH K. JOHNSON)
This selection presents a range of views on the propriety of National Security Agency warrantless wiretapping, a subject that became controversial when the George W. Bush Administration bypassed the law that requires warrants for electronic eavesdropping.

PART IX INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES IN THE AFTERMATH OF THE 9/11 AND WMD INTELLIGENCE FAILURES 425

32. 9/11 Intelligence Failure 429
KEAN COMMISSION
The 9/11 Commission, led by former New Jersey Governor Thomas H. Kean, wrote a rare best-selling government document that highlighted intelligence mistakes made prior to the 9/11 attacks and suggested how to improve America’s security against terrorism.

33. Spying Blind 473
AMY B. ZEGART
In this chapter from her book on recent intelligence failures, Zegart attributes many inadequacies of U.S. intelligence to organizational flaws in the design of the nation’s secret agencies.

34. Hiding in Plain Sight: Denial, Deception, and the Non-State Actor 492
JAMES J. WIRTZ
The advent of the information age has allowed small, non-state actors, particularly terrorist organizations, to engage in denial and deception—often with devastating results. This chapter explains why intelligence organizations have been slow to adjust to this threat, allowing terrorist groups to carry out their attacks while hiding in plain sight of their targets.

35. Intelligence, Policy, and the War in Iraq 498
PAUL R. PILLAR
A former CIA analyst explores the intelligence failures that contributed to America’s entry into the Second Persian Gulf War in 2003.
36. Intelligence and Homeland Security 505
   James Burch
   An expert on homeland security poses the question: Should the United States have a domestic intelligence service?

PART X INTELLIGENCE: A COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVE 523

37. The Soviet Intelligence Community 529
   Alexander Orlov
   A former Russian intelligence officer offers a postmortem on how the Soviet secret service kept citizens in line and protected the regime from both internal and external political threats.

38. The British Experience with Intelligence 539
   Percy Craddock
   A leading former British intelligence officer ruminates on the challenges of intelligence collection and analysis.

39. Egyptian Intelligence 547
   Owen L. Sirrs
   This chapter offers a rare look into the intelligence apparatus of a Middle East nation.

40. French Intelligence 561
   Sébastien Laurent
   A leading French scholar explores how intelligence has evolved into an integral aspect of government in France.
