CONTENTS

List of illustrations vii
Contributors viii
Acknowledgements xi

1 The contested terrain of European territorial governance: new perspectives on democratic deficits and political displacements 1
Jonathan Metzger, Phil Almendinger and Stijn Oosterlynck

2 Post-political regimes in English planning: from Third Way to Big Society 29
Phil Almendinger and Graham Haughton

3 In search of the irreducible political moment: or why planning shouldn’t be too hung up on conflictuality 55
Kristina Grange

4 Opposing the postpolitical Swedish urban discourse 69
Moa Tunström and Karin Bradley

5 Rethinking politics and the (post-)political through Deleuze-Guattarian micropolitics 85
Matthias Loepfe and Joris Van Wezemael

6 Impossible common ground: planning and reconciliation 107
John Ploger
vi Contents

7 Hopeless postpolitics, professional idiots, and the fate of public space in Stockholm Parklife 129
  Jonas Bylund and Andrew Byerley

8 Conflict management, democratic demands, and the post-politics of privatisation 153
  Mike Raco

9 Planning as war by other means 171
  Mekonnen Tesfahuney and Richard Ek

10 The moose are protesting: the more-than-human politics of transport infrastructure development 191
  Jonathan Metzger

11 Insurgent architects and the spectral return of the urban political 215
  Erik Swyngedouw and Japhy Wilson

Index 227