Allies or Enemies
Political relations between Spain and Great Britain during the reign of Ferdinand VII (1808-1833)

Translated by Jacek Chelminiak
Table of Contents

Preface ........................................................................................................................................... 7

Chapter I
Control of foreign policy and diplomatic service in Spain and Great Britain in the early 19th century .................................................................................................................. 17

1. Spain ........................................................................................................................................ 17

2. Great Britain ............................................................................................................................ 33

Chapter II
Political relations between Spain and Great Britain at the turn of the 18th and 19th centuries ................................................................................................................................. 49

Chapter III
Towards normalisation. Political relations between Spain and Great Britain in the years 1808-1814 .......................................................................................................................... 63

1. Outbreak of the Spanish War of Independence and Spain’s political turn towards Great Britain ................................................................................................................................. 63

2. Great Britain vis-à-vis the initiative of the Spanish provincial juntas – establishing diplomatic relations in 1808 ............................................................................................................. 75

3. Great Britain’s first diplomatic-military missions to the Spanish provinces. London’s policy with regard to the centralisation of power in Spain ................................................................ 88

4. John Hookham Frere’s mission to the Central Junta ................................................................ 102

5. The Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Alliance of 14 January 1809 – negotiations, resolutions and implementations thereof ......................................................... 118

Chapter IV
Hispanic America in Spanish-British relations during the Spanish War of Independence ................................................................................................................................. 165

Chapter V
Spanish-British relations in the age of the European Reconstruction ........................................................................................................................................ 205
Chapter VI
The problem of Hispanic America continued. Resuming the project of British mediation in the Spanish colonies and the treaty of 1817 that abolished the slave trade ................................................................. 263

Chapter VII
Great Britain in the face of the Spanish Liberal Revolution (1820-1823) and the intervention of the Holy Alliance on the Iberian peninsula .................. 301

Chapter VIII
Towards recognising Spanish America ............................................................. 339

Chapter IX
In quest of a rapprochement between London and Madrid (1826-1833) – from “the Portuguese question” to “the Spanish one” ........................................ 355

Conclusion ........................................................................................................ 387
Bibliography ...................................................................................................... 395
Index of names .................................................................................................. 423
Resumen ........................................................................................................... 435