TABLE OF CONTENTS

FOREWORD ................................................................. v

I. RURAL PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION: THE CURRENT STATUS

1. State of the Art in Rural Public Transportation,
   Underwood and McKelvey ........................................ 3

2. Results of the Section 147 Demonstration Program,
   Burkhardt ............................................................. 6

3. Organizational and Service Options for Public Transportation
   in Non-urbanized Areas,
   Kirby ........................................................................... 12

4. Planning Rural Transportation Systems: Lessons from the Section 147 Demonstration Program,
   Burkhardt .................................................................... 15

5. Summary of Coordination Efforts in the Section 147
   Demonstration Program,
   Ketola, Madsen, Simpson and Stevens ......................... 20

6. Service and Organizational Options in Rural Public Transportation:
   Lessons Learned from the Section 147 Demonstrations,
   Benacquista and Smith .................................................. 24

7. Service and Performance in the Section 147 Demonstrations,
   McGillivray and Tolson .................................................. 27

II. MANAGING A STATE PROGRAM

1. A Method for Distributing Federal Small Urban and Rural Transit
   Assistance at the State Level,
   Forkenbrock .................................................................. 33

2. Coordination at the State Level: Approaches and Importance,
   Garland and Eberlein ...................................................... 43

3. Statewide Use of Discounted Transportation Tickets by the Transportation Disadvantaged in West Virginia, 1974–1979,
   Curry ............................................................................. 49

4. Florida's Approach to Transit Management,
   Miller .............................................................................. 54
5. Public Transit Management/Technical Assistance in Iowa,
  Sherkow ........................................... 56

III. LOCAL SYSTEM MANAGEMENT

1. Developing and Managing a Rural Transit System: A Federal,
   State and Local Challenge,
  Vinson ........................................... 63

2. The Transition from Specialized to Public Transportation,
  Garrity ........................................... 65

3. Marketing Rural Transit,
  Panebianco ....................................... 69

4. Selecting Transportation Board Members,
  Conlon ........................................... 71

IV. COORDINATION: A CLOSER LOOK

1. Assessing the Potential for Coordination,
  Ketola ........................................... 75

2. Coordinated Transportation Systems: Potential Costs and Benefits,
  Burkhardt ........................................ 78

3. Procedures and Progress Toward the Establishment of Uniform
   Accounting Capability in Jackson County, Michigan,
  Hunt ............................................. 82

V. THE BROKERAGE APPROACH

1. Brokering Public Transportation Services in Non-urbanized and Rural Areas,
  Mundy ............................................ 91

2. Attempting to Implement an Elderly and Handicapped Transportation
   Brokerage: The Lessons from Northern Kentucky Transit, Inc.
  Goble, Ruccio and Siria .......................... 94

3. Organizational and Service Alternatives: The Constrained Broker,
   Siria with Smith ................................ 100

VI. CONTRACTING FOR RURAL TRANSPORTATION SERVICES

1. Establishing a Contractual Framework for Delivery of Paratransit
   Services,
  Forstall and Alschuler .......................... 105

2. Contracting with Private InterCity Carriers,
  Rudnick with Fritz ................................ 112
VII. SPECIAL CONCERNS

1. Resolving the Human Service Insurance Dilemma,
   Davis with Cleary .................................................. 117

2. Application of Section 13(c) Employee Protections to the Non-urban Transportation Program (Section 18),
   Weiss. ................................................................. 122

3. Air Transportation and Telecommunications: Some Future Prospects,
   Kaye ................................................................. 126

APPENDICES

Appendix 1: Workshop and Session Notes ........................................ 133
Appendix 2: State Reports on Rural Public Transportation .................. 144
Appendix 3: Documents at the Conference Resource Center ................. 147
Appendix 4: AASHTO Standing Committee on Public
   Transportation ....................................................... 149