ELLEN BRAAE

Beauty Redeemed

RECYCLING POST-INDUSTRIAL LANDSCAPES

IKAROS Press, Risskov • BIRKHÄUSER, Basel
Contents

Map of case studies  8

Interventions!
Learning from Duisburg-Nord  10

A new kind of sustainability  10
Industrial areas as new cultural heritage  12
An epistemological breakthrough in design  13
Structure and messages  14

Industrial landscapes as an element of post-industrial urbanisation  20

Waves of industrialisation  21
Factories and infrastructure  22
Motorisation and mass production  22
Globalisation and de-industrialisation  23

Detroit, the 20th-century capital  27

Phases of Fordism  28
Standardised work routines on the assembly line  30
The factory as a city machine  30
Decentralised production  30

The impact of Fordism on architecture and urban planning  30

Post-Fordism – Toyotism  33

De-industrialisation  38

The collapse of Detroit  38
Stalking Detroit  39

The Ruhr District, a 21st-century capital  42

New urban development patterns  42
Growth and decline  44
Drosscape or terrain vague?  47

IBA Emscher Park, Germany  50
Potteries Thinkbelt, England  56
Fürst-Pückler-Land, Germany  60
02

The post-industrial landscape – a new kind of cultural heritage 67

The leavings of the past and site-specific aspects 70
  Industrial culture as a new field for preservation? 70
  ‘New Heritage’ 75

Urbs fluxus 78

Urban mutability and the role of the landscape as a mediator 79
  The city as a single vast ecosystem 83

The city of intermediate spaces 86
  Open spaces as inverted ‘objects’ 92
  Dynamic enclaves and heterotopias 93
  The role of post-industrial landscapes 95
  The challenges and potentials of the new cultural heritage landscape 98

03

Landscape aesthetics and atmospheres 121

From the breakdown of norms to an action-oriented interdisciplinary approach 124
  Profession and concept 125
  New departures and new formulations in the design professions 126
  Between art and science 130

An eye for landscape 134
  Background of the concept of landscape 134
  Ritter’s landscape 137
  Seel’s critique of Ritter 138
  A modern-day ‘landscape’ 140

The return of natural beauty 142
  The Beautiful, the Sublime and the Picturesque 143
  The aesthetic experience 144
  Seel’s aesthetic forms of experience 145
  Atmosphere 147

Convergence between goodness and beauty? 150
  Beauty in the perspective of sustainability 151
04

The fascination with ruins and ruinous industrial landscapes as sites of memory 173

The ruin as a monument 176
   From waste to monument and the cult of ruins 176
   The inherent values of ruins – looking for essence 180
      Distinguishing values 180
      A balance of forces 182

Building a future out of ruins 184
   Fragments and processing them 184
   Reverse ruin 187
   Ruinosity and present day ruins 188

The nature of memory 192
   Input from the theory of memory 193
   The social structure of memory 194
   The spatial anchorage of memory 195
   Places of memory and topoi 197
   Experience and perception 199

Ruinous industrial landscapes as places of memory 200
   Monuments and memorial structures 200
   A matrix for preservation 202
   The city as collective memory 203
   The mutability of the ‘monument’ 204
   Dynamic anchors of memory 205

Parque do Tejo e Trancão, Portugal 206
Frederiksværk, Denmark 212
Île de Nantes, France 218

05

Industrial landscapes between preservation, restoration and re-use 227

Industrial areas between preservation and re-use 228
   Interpretation as an artistic practice 230
   Post-production 230

Use of spolia 234
   Spolia in 20th-century urban theory 234
   Use of spolia in post-Antiquity 236
   The potential uses of spolia in transformation strategy 237

Ideologies and practices of restoration 240
   John Ruskin – the ethicist of decay 240
   Eugène Viollet-le-Duc – optimising structural logic 242
   Carlo Scarpa one present – one past 245
   The Exners – processes ‘as found’ 247
   Chipperfield and Harrap – remodelling architectural intentions 251

Approaches to transformation 254

Halden Zollverein, Germany 256
Westpark Bochum, Germany 262
Parc aux Angéliques, France 268