INTRODUCTION
MATTHEW DANIEL EDDY, SEYMOUR H. MAUSKOPF, AND WILLIAM R. NEWMAN: An Introduction to Chemical Knowledge in the Early Modern World

THE AGE OF CHYMISTRY (1450–1700)
JENNIFER M. RAMPLING: Transmuting Sericon: Alchemy as “Practical Exegesis” in Early Modern England
JOHN A. NORRIS: Auß Quecksilber und Schwefel Rein: Johann Mathesius (1504–65) and Sulfur-Mercurius in the Silver Mines of Joachimstal
BRUCE T. MORAN: Eloquence in the Marketplace: Erudition and Pragmatic Humanism in the Restoration of Chymia
WILLIAM R. NEWMAN: Robert Boyle, Transmutation, and the History of Chemistry before Lavoisier: A Response to Kuhn

TRANSITIONS FROM CHYMISTRY TO CHEMISTRY (1675–1750)
ANNA MARIE ROOS: The Chymistry of ‘The Learned Dr Plot’ (1640–96)
LAWRENCE M. PRINCIPE: The End of Alchemy? The Repudiation and Persistence of Chrysopoeia at the Académie Royale des Sciences in the Eighteenth Century
BERNARD JOLY: Etienne-François Geoffroy (1672–1731), a Chemist on the Frontiers

CHEMISTRY IN THE 18TH CENTURY
KU-MING (KEVIN) CHANG: Communications of Chemical Knowledge: Georg Ernst Stahls and the Chemists at the French Academy of Sciences in the First Half of the Eighteenth Century
JOHN C. POWERS: Measuring Fire: Herman Boerhaave and the Introduction of Thermometry into Chemistry
MATTHEW DANIEL EDDY: How to See a Diagram: A Visual Anthropology of Chemical Affinity
MARCO BERETTA: Between the Workshop and the Laboratory: Lavoisier's Network of Instrument Makers
MATTHEW JAMES CRAWFORD: An Empire's Extract: Chemical Manipulations of Cinchona Bark in the Eighteenth-Century Spanish Atlantic World
HJALMAR FORS: Elements in the Melting Pot: Merging Chemistry, Assaying, and Natural History, Ca. 1730–1760
CHRISTINE LEHMAN: Pierre-Joseph Macquer: Chemistry in the French Enlightenment
URSULA KLEIN: Chemical Expertise: Chemistry in the Royal Prussian Porcelain Manufactory 262
BERNADETTE BENSUADE-VINCENT: Concluding Remarks: A View of the Past Through the Lens of the Present 298

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS 311

INDEX 313