BEYOND THE IDYLL: CONTESTED SPACES OF RURAL TOURISM

The Negotiation, Commodification and Consumption of Conflicting Ruralities

Thesis for the degree of Philosophiae Doctor

Trondheim, January 2014

Norwegian University of Science and Technology
Faculty of Social Sciences and Technology Management
Department of Geography

NTNU – Trondheim
Norwegian University of Science and Technology
Preface ................................................................................................................................. i
Summary.............................................................................................................................. iii
Sammendrag......................................................................................................................... v
INTRODUCTION .................................................................................................................. 1
Background: profound rural changes .................................................................................... 1
The onset: four observations .................................................................................................. 5
  Observation 1: Rural developments are incoherent ......................................................... 5
  Observation 2: Rural policies point to rural tourism as a rural saviour ......................... 6
  Observation 3: Rural tourism’s resource base of rurality could be diminishing ............. 7
  Observation 4: Weaknesses in rural geography’s and tourism research’s knowledge on rural tourism .................................................................................................................................................................................. 8
Research Questions ............................................................................................................ 9
  Set 1: Tourists’ consumption of ‘countryside capital’ ..................................................... 9
  Set 2: Authenticating countryside capital in rural tourism’s commodification and consumption ................................................................................................................................. 10
  Set 3: Contested spaces of rural tourism ..................................................................... 10
Layout of the thesis ............................................................................................................ 11
THEORETICAL PERSPECTIVES ....................................................................................... 13
Approaches to rural: from essentialism to hybrid tactics of co-constituting natures ............ 14
  What is ‘rural’, if anything? A rural geography fighting off existential crises ............ 15
  A Halfacreean approach: rural space as a trialectic emergence ..................................... 26
  A sympathetic critique of the Halfacreean architecture of rural space: some pros and cons ........................................................................................................................................................ 35
Consuming the rural ............................................................................................................ 39
Authenticity ......................................................................................................................... 46
METHODOLOGY: RESEARCHING CONTESTED SPACES ........................................... 51
The social ‘reality’: my ontological perspective and epistemological position .................. 51
Gathering and analysing data ............................................................................................ 56
  Methods: generating the data ....................................................................................... 56
Analysing and interpreting the data
Reflexivity: Researcher’s position
Some ethical considerations
CONCLUSION

The papers – a brief overview

Beyond the idyll of rural tourism: addressing the research questions

Set 1: Tourists’ consumption of countryside capital

Set 2: Authenticating countryside capital in rural tourism’s commodification and consumption

Set 3: Contested spaces of rural tourism

Dissertation’s implications

Implications for the field of rural studies I: empirical contributions
Implications for the field of rural studies II: conceptual contributions
Implications for further research: new issues
Implications for rural policy, rural developments and rural tourism: a word of caution

REFERENCES

PAPER #1 – Setting the stage: On tourist’s consumption of rural

PAPER #2 – Digging deeper: On authenticating the rural

PAPER #3 – Going beyond the idyll: negotiating contested spaces

APPENDIX

LETTERS TO INFORMANTS

To tourism entrepreneurs/hosts
To local residents
Approval from Norsk Samfunnsvitenskapelig Datatjeneste
Survey questionnaire
Interview guides ........................................................................................................................................... g

Qualitative interviews with tourism entrepreneurs/hosts................................................................. g
Qualitative interviews with land owners in land owner conflict................................................... j
Qualitative interviews with representatives from tourism organisations (Destination Organisations, etc.) ................................................................. l

Qualitative interviews with mayors........................................................................................................ m
Qualitative interviews with municipal administrative leaders....................................................... n

Qualitative interviews with municipal planner.................................................................................. o

Qualitative interviews with informants from Regional Development Organisation (RDO). p
Qualitative interviews with local residents......................................................................................... u

Qualitative interviews with tourists ........................................................................................................ w