Thorsten Hennig-Thurau · Mark B. Houston

Entertainment Science

Data Analytics and Practical Theory for Movies, Games, Books, and Music
Contents

1 Forget the "Nobody-Knows-Anything" Mantra: It's Time for Entertainment Science! 1
The "Nobody-Knows-Anything" Mantra in Entertainment 3
Why Entertainment Science Should Be the New Mantra of the Entertainment Industry 6
Avoiding the "Nobody-Knows-Anything" Trap with Data Analytics 6
Avoiding the "False-Precision" Trap with Theory 9
Understanding (and Overcoming) the Persistent Forces of the "Nobody-Knows-Anything" Mantra 15
How This Book is Organized: Entertainment Science as a Cross-Product Approach to Knowledge Generation 17
Before We (Really) Get Started: Some Words on the Empirical Methods Employed by Entertainment Science Scholars 23
Regression Analysis as the Econometric "Mother" of Entertainment Science Methods 23
Some Challenges—and a Quick Glance at Methodological Approaches to Master Them 27
Concluding Comments 33
References 34
Part I  Products, Markets, & Consumers—The Business and Economics of Entertainment

2  The Fundamentals of Entertainment

What’s Entertainment? 41
Why is Entertainment Important After All? 43
Entertainment Generates Substantial Economic Value! 44
Entertainment is a Pioneering Industry! 45
Entertainment Defines Our (and Your) World! 48
Concluding Comments 56
References 56

3  Why Entertainment Products are Unique: Key Characteristics

Entertainment Products Offer Hedonic Benefits 62
The Pleasure Principle 62
Holistic Judgment 65
Hedonic Does Not Rule Out Utilitarian 66
Managerial Consequences of the Hedonic Character 68
Entertainment Products Are Prone to Satiation Effects 69
Of Utilities and Satiation 69
Levels of Satiation in Entertainment 72
Managerial Consequences of the Satiation Effect 75
Entertainment Products are Cultural Products 76
Entertainment Products Express Attitudes and Values 77
Entertainment Products Constitute Cultures and Influence Their Choices 82
Managerial Consequences of the Cultural Character 85
Entertainment Products are Difficult to Judge 86
The Experience (and Quasi-Search) Good Character of Entertainment 86
Entertainment Choices Depend on Taste 89
Managerial Consequences of the Difficulty to Judge Entertainment 97
Entertainment Products are Creative Products 98
The “Art-for-Art’s-Sake” Property of Entertainment 99
The “Motley Crew” Property of Entertainment 101
The “Infinite Variety” Property of Entertainment 103
Managerial Consequences of the Creative Character 104
Entertainment Products are Information Goods 106
Contents

The “First-Copy Cost” Property of Entertainment ......................................................... 106
Managerial Consequences of the Information Good Character ........................................... 108
Entertainment Products Have Short Life Cycles ............................................................. 109
The “Perishability” Property of Entertainment ............................................................... 109
Managerial Consequences of Entertainment’s Short Life Cycles ........................................ 112
Entertainment Products (Potentially) Have Externalities .................................................. 113
The “Two-Sided” Property of Entertainment ................................................................. 113
Managerial Consequences of Entertainment Products’ Externalities ................................. 116
Concluding Comments ...................................................................................................... 117
References ......................................................................................................................... 117

4 Why Entertainment Markets Are Unique: Key Characteristics

The Big Entertainment Picture: Two Sub-Markets Characterized by High Innovation and Partial Concentration .............................................................. 125
High Innovation Frequency in Entertainment Markets ....................................................... 128
A Tendency Toward Concentration: High Entry Barriers in Entertainment Markets .......... 130
Production and Marketing Resources .................................................................................. 130
Distribution Resources ......................................................................................................... 132
Access to and Control of Creatives and Their Works as Resources .................................... 135
Technological Resources ...................................................................................................... 137
Even More Concentration: Network Effects ....................................................................... 139
Direct Network Effects ......................................................................................................... 139
Indirect Network Effects and How They Influence the Success of Entertainment Products .............................................................................................................. 141
Managerial Consequences of Entertainment Markets’ Characteristics ............................... 145
Concluding Comments ......................................................................................................... 147
References ......................................................................................................................... 147

5 Creating Value, Making Money: Essential Business Models for Entertainment Products

A Value Creation Framework for Entertainment .................................................................. 151
Who are Those Who Create Entertainment Value and How They Do It: A Snapshot of Players, Products, and Trends ................................................................. 157
Contents

Major Studios, Labels, and Publishers: The Entertainment Conglomerates 157
The Market for Filmed Content: Movies and TV Productions 164
The Market for Written Content: Recreational Books 169
The Market for Recorded Content: Music 171
The Market for Programmed Content: Electronic Games 174
The Dynamics of Entertainment: Some Words on Integration and Transformation Processes 176
Transforming Value into Money: Approaches for Managing Revenues and Risk 182
Generating Revenues from Consumers 183
Generating Revenues from Advertisers 194
Generating “Revenues” from Third Parties: The Case of Subsidies and Other Public Benefits 202
Managing the Risk of Entertainment Products 206
Concluding Comments 224
References 225

6 The Consumption Side of Entertainment 233
Why We Love to Be Entertained: The Sensations-Familiarity Framework of Entertainment Consumption 234
The Specific Motivational Values that Lead Us to Consume Entertainment 237
Of Sensations and Familiarity 241
The Emotional Facet of Entertainment Consumption 244
How Emotions Work 245
What Kinds of Emotions Exist? 249
Which Emotions Affect Entertainment Decisions—and How? 253
The Imagery Facet of Entertainment Consumption 259
On Event Models, Images, and Imagery 260
The Power of Imagery: Narrative Transportation, Immersion, and Flow 264
Narrative Transportation 264
A Process Model of Entertainment Consumption 275
Concluding Comments 281
References 282
Part II Managing & Marketing Entertainment—What Makes an Entertainment Product a Hit?

7 Entertainment Product Decisions, Episode 1: The Quality of the Entertainment Experience
Linking (Experience) Quality with Product Success
What Makes High-Quality (a.k.a. "Great") Entertainment?
Getting Closer to the Product's Core: What Makes a "Great" Storyline?
Using Analytics and Theory to Understand "Great" Storytelling
Can Computers Craft "Great" Stories?
Concluding Comments
References

8 Entertainment Product Decisions, Episode 2: Search Qualities and Unbranded Signals
Technology as a Search Attribute in Entertainment
Technology and the Quality of Games
Technology and the Quality of Movies
Technology and the Quality of Books
Technology and the Quality of Music
Signals of Quality for Entertainment Products
Entertainment Genres and Themes
Entertainment Ratings and the Controversial Content on Which They Are Based Entertainment's Country of Origin
The Production Budget
Concluding Comments
References

9 Entertainment Product Decisions, Episode 3: Brands as Quality Signals
The Fundamentals of Entertainment Branding
What's in an Entertainment Brand?
Strategic Options of Entertainment Branding
Brand Elements: What is a Good Brand Name (and Does it Matter Financially)?
Entertainment Line Extensions: The Case of Sequels and Remakes
Contents

What Sequels and Remakes Have in Common—and What Sets Them Apart 386
“Average” Return and Risk Effects for Entertainment Line Extensions 388
A Closer Look at the Factors that Make a Successful Entertainment Line Extension 395
The Dynamics of Line Extension Similarity: Of Thresholds that Vary with Time 403
Entertainment Category Extensions 404
Why Do a Category Extension? 405
How Category Extensions Affect Revenues and Risk: Averages and Contingencies 406
Stars as Human Entertainment Brands 409
How Do Stars Generate Value for Consumers? 410
The Financial Impact of Stars on Product Success 415
When You Wish to be a Star: The Controversial Roles of Talent and Serendipity 424
Franchise Management: A Holistic Look on Entertainment Brands 429
How Thinking in Franchises Shapes the Economic Logic 429
When the Extension Affects the Original Brand: Reciprocal Spillover Effects 434
From STAR WARS to Marvel: The Rise of Entertainment Universes 438
What’s an Entertainment Brand Worth? Using Econometric Approaches for Measuring Brand Equity in Entertainment 446
Going Beyond Averages and Subsets: On the Valuation of Individual Entertainment Brands 446
Valuing the Next SPIDER-MAN Sequel 447
Concluding Comments 452
References 453

10 Entertainment Product Decisions, Episode 4: How to Develop New Successful Entertainment Products 463
The Strategic Dimension of Entertainment Innovations 465
Artistic Versus Economic Innovation Goals 465
The “Right” Degree of Innovativeness 469
Make, Cooperate, or Buy? 473
Some Threats to Systematic Innovation Management in Entertainment 476
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Contents</th>
<th>xxvi</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Cultural Dimension of Entertainment Innovation</td>
<td>482</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Theme 1: Autonomy and Responsibility</td>
<td>483</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Theme 2: Adherence to a Shared Core Goal</td>
<td>485</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Theme 3: Entrepreneurial Orientation</td>
<td>486</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Theme 4: Peer Culture Built on Candor and Trust</td>
<td>487</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Organizational Dimension of Entertainment Innovation</td>
<td>488</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The “Who” Question: The Importance of Human Resources</td>
<td>489</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The “How” Question: Creativity Needs Freedom</td>
<td>492</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Product Level: How to Forecast the Success of New Entertainment Products</td>
<td>497</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Some Words on the Essentials of Success Prediction</td>
<td>498</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Prediction Methods: Feature-Based Versus Diffusion-Based Success Prediction</td>
<td>501</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The “When” of Success Predictions: Early Versus Later Approaches</td>
<td>509</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>So, Better to Wait for the Fanny to Squirm or Use Prediction Models?</td>
<td>514</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Concluding Comments</td>
<td>516</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>References</td>
<td>517</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11 Entertainment Communication Decisions, Episode 1: Paid and Owned Channels</td>
<td>523</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Control or Not to Control: Some Words on the Three Basic Communication Categories</td>
<td>523</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What to Communicate: Designing the Content that Fuels Entertainment Communication Channels</td>
<td>526</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What Makes a Powerful Trailer?</td>
<td>527</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What Makes a Powerful Poster Ad?</td>
<td>531</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The “How-Much” Question: Can There Be Too Much of a Good Thing?</td>
<td>532</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attracting Consumers via Paid Media: The Role of Advertising</td>
<td>538</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Functions of Advertising</td>
<td>538</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How Much to Spend—and When: Some Introductory Comments on Advertising Budgets and Timing</td>
<td>540</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Some General Insights on the Effectiveness of Entertainment Advertising</td>
<td>544</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Effectiveness of Pre-Release Advertising</td>
<td>547</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Effectiveness of Post-Release Advertising</td>
<td>553</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balancing Advertising Timing Within and Between Sequential Distribution Channels</td>
<td>555</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Contents

Attracting (and Keeping) Audiences via Owned Media: Playing Pinball 558
The Pinball Framework of (Entertainment) Communication 560
Content that Matters 562
Managing Consumer Engagement: Co-Creation and Moderation 567
How Effective is Communication Through Owned Media? 574
A Different Kind of Owned Media: Packaging as a Communication Instrument 577
Concluding Comments 580
References 581

12 Entertainment Communication Decisions, Episode 2: “Earned” Channels 587
Informed Cascades: The Power of Word of Mouth 588
What Makes Us Articulate Word of Mouth? 590
Does Word of Mouth Influence Entertainment Product Success? Yes. But It’s Complicated 593
Uninformed Cascades: The Power of Herds 606
Post-Release Action-Based Cascades: When Entertainment Success Breeds Entertainment Success 607
Pre-Release Action-Based Cascades: Buzz 618
Automated Personalized Recommendations 630
How Recommender Systems Work: A Look at Their Algorithmic Logic 632
Recommenders are Way More Than Algorithms: Beyond Matrix Completion 642
How “Good” are Recommender Systems? 647
Professional Reviews 648
Review(er) Effects on Consumers: The “Influencer Versus Predictor” Controversy 649
Toward an Even Richer Understanding of Professional Reviews: Moderators and Mediators of Their Impact 655
Managerial (Mis-)Use of Professional Reviews 659
Awards as Recognitions of Excellence in Entertainment 661
Some Essentials of Entertainment Awards 661
Awards and Success: What Entertainment Science Can Tell Us About Their Link 662
Managerial (Mis-)Use of Awards 666
Concluding Comments 668
References 669
13 Entertainment Distribution Decisions
The Timing Challenge: When is the Right Time for an Entertainment Product?
Isolated Timing Effects
Competitive Timing
The Multi-Channel Challenge: Orchestrating the Multiple Formats of Entertainment
What's to be Considered When Designing the Optimal Channel Mix
Valuing Alternative Distribution Models Empirically
The Piracy Challenge: How to Deal with Competitors Who Offer One's Own Products for Free
The Impact of Piracy
How to Fight Entertainment Piracy
Concluding Comments
References

14 Entertainment Pricing Decisions
A Primer on Pricing Theory: Customer Value as the True Foundation of Pricing
The Uniform Versus Differential Pricing Puzzle of Entertainment
Theoretical Arguments for Differential Pricing—and Against It
Consumer Reactions to Entertainment Product Prices in General
What We Know About Consumer Reactions to Differential Pricing for Entertainment Products
Price Discrimination: Different Prices for Different Customers (and Products)
First-Degree Discrimination: "Perfect" Price Discrimination
Second-Degree Discrimination: Versioning and Bundling
Third-Degree Discrimination: Segment Pricing
Concluding Comments
References

15 Integrated Entertainment Marketing: Creating Blockbusters and Niche Products by Combining Product, Communication, Distribution, and Pricing Decisions
The "Pre-Sales Approach": The Blockbuster Concept
Defining the Blockbuster Concept
"The Monster that Ate Hollywood": A Short Blockbuster History 790
Blockbuster Diffusion: Innovators and Buzz are What It Takes! 796
The "Experience Approach": The Niche Concept 800
Defining the Niche Concept 800
Niche Diffusion: Imitators and Quality are What It Takes! 801
The Long Tail: Using the Opportunities of Digital Media 803
Blockbusters Versus Niche Products: Where We Stand Today and the "Too-Much-of-a-Good-Thing" Problem 806
Living in a Blockbuster World! 806
The "Too-Much-of-a-Good-Thing" Trap 811
Concluding Comments 817
References 818

Now Unlock the Power of Entertainment Science! 821

Entertainment Science Scholar Index 825

Industry Index 831

Subject Index 851

About the Authors 863