WORLD TELEVISION
From Global to Local

Joseph D. Straubhaar
The University of Texas at Austin

SAGE Publications
Los Angeles • London • New Delhi • Singapore
Contents

Preface xi

Chapter 1. A Multilayered World of Television: An Overview 1
Central Issues
Globalization and Culture
Complexity, Structuration, and Cultural Agents
Structural and Cultural Process Frameworks for World Television
Colonialism and Imperialism
Cultural Imperialism
Postcolonial National Television
Globalization
Roles and Impacts of Technology
Asymmetrical Interdependence and Asymmetrical Cultural Interpenetration: A Proposed Model
Imported TV Versus Local and National: Producers Localize, Glocalize, and Hybridize
Cultural Identification and Proximity
Cultural Hybridization

Chapter 2. Hybridization and the Roots of Transnational, Geocultural, and Cultural-Linguistic Markets 31
Precolonial Cultural History and Television
Hybridization
Emergent Change Versus Hybridization
Hybridity and Television
The Roots of Transnational, Geocultural, and Cultural-Linguistic Regions and Markets
Precolonial Forces: Before 1492
European Colonialism
Imperialism
Broadcasting Models: From Colonial to Postcolonial

The Cold War and the Major Models for Broadcasting
Hybridity and National Development

Chapter 3. Creating National and Regional Television and Cultural Industries

Dependency, the Cold War, and Television Industry Production
Cultural Imperialism and Media Imperialism
Local Cultural Production
Cultural Imports
The Nation-State and Television
Dependence and Ownership
The State as Owner
The Economic and Political Role of States
Import Substitution in Cultural Industries
Adaptation and Glocalization of Foreign Models
Advertising
National Conglomerates and Competition
The Cultural Role of States: National Security and National Identity
Cultural Industries
Crucial Structural Conditions of National Cultural Industries
Achieving National Coverage via Satellite
Supplementing National Coverage via Satellite: Translocal Television in the Nation
Television Above and Below the National Level
Glocal Processes and National Identities

Chapter 4. Creating Global, U.S., and Transnational Television Spaces

Globalization Broadly Defined
Economic Globalization
Globalization as the Spread of Capitalist Modernity
Economic Neoliberalism and American Empire
American Empire: Film and Television
Rethinking Audiences for the U.S. Empire
Globalization, Changing National Policy, and the State
Deregulation, Liberalization, and Privatization

Chapter 5. Increasing Concentrations of Global and National Television Technologies

Cycles of Technology
Technology and Policy
Technology and Migration
Cultural Imports
The Nation-State and Television
Dependency and Ownership
The State as Owner
The Economic and Political Role of States
Import Substitution in Cultural Industries
Adaptation and Glocalization of Foreign Models
Advertising
National Conglomerates and Competition
The Cultural Role of States: National Security and National Identity
Cultural Industries
Crucial Structural Conditions of National Cultural Industries
Achieving National Coverage via Satellite
Supplementing National Coverage via Satellite: Translocal Television in the Nation
Television Above and Below the National Level
Glocal Processes and National Identities

Chapter 6. Producing National and Global Television Genre

Structuring the Production System
Television Genre and the Cultural Industry
Economic Boundaries and Program Design
Material Versus Complex
Complexity, Patterns, and Cultural Boundaries
Complexity, Patterns, and Cultural Boundaries

Ricoeur and the Cultural Text
Global Spread of Market Capitalism
Global Economics and Advertising
Direct Investment and Partnerships
Resisting Liberalization and Privatization
Globalization via International Trade
Regimes and Multilateral Governance
Migration as Globalization
Transnational Television
Geocultural or Cultural-Linguistic Regions
Asymmetrical Interdependence and World Television

Chapter 5. Increasing Complexity: The Technology of Creating Global and National Television Spaces
Television Technology as a Structuring Force
Technologies Facilitate Pattern Ruptures
Cycles of Technology
Technology and Production
Technology and Media Distribution and Flows
Satellites
From Cross-Border Spillover to Direct Satellite Broadcasting
Satellites and Cable TV
Satellite TV at Global, Regional, and National Levels
TV Technology, Access, and Choice
Economic Capital and Access to Television Technologies
Cable and Satellite TV Relative to Broadcast TV
Geography, Language, and Other Barriers to Satellite or Cable TV

Chapter 6. Producing National Television, Glocal and Local Structuring the Producers’ World
Television Genre and Structure
Cultural Industry Producers
Economic Boundaries on Television Genre and Program Development
Material Versus Symbolic Boundaries
Complexity, Patterns, and Genres
Cultural Boundaries: Feedback to Producers
Complexity, Prefiguration, and Cultural Hybridity
Complexity and Cultural Change
Ricoeur and the Hybridization Process
Glocalization
Localization as Japanization or Brazilianization
Structuration and Television Production in Brazil
The Hybrid History of the Telenovela
   Brazilianization as Hybridization
National Television Flows and Production
   Limits to Focusing on National Flows and Production
   TV Genres and TV Flow in the 1950s
   TV Genres and TV Flow in the 1960s
   TV Genres and TV Flow in the 1970s
   TV Genres and TV Flow in the 1980s
   TV Genres and TV Flow in the 1990s
   TV Genres and TV Flow in the 2000s
TV and Genre Flow Conclusions

Chapter 7. TV Exporters: From American Empire to Cultural-Linguistic Markets
   Genre Imperialism?
   Genres Flowed Before Programs
   Delocalization
   Trends Toward Regionalization of Television
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1960s
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1970s
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1980s
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1990s
      World, Regional, National, and Local Genres and Flows in the 2000s
   Overall Trends in Broadcast Television Flows
      Global Flows
      From Program Genre and Idea Flows to Licensed Format Flows
      Localization of Global and Transnational Television Channels
      Broadcast Television Genre Flows
      Versus Satellite, Cable, and Internet Flows

Chapter 8. Multiple Pi and Audiences: Cultural-Linguistic Markets
   Genre Imperialism?
   Genres Flowed Before Programs
   Delocalization
   Trends Toward Regionalization of Television
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1960s
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1970s
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1980s
      Flows of Television Programming and Genres in the 1990s
      World, Regional, National, and Local Genres and Flows in the 2000s
   Overall Trends in Broadcast Television Flows
      Global Flows
      From Program Genre and Idea Flows to Licensed Format Flows
      Localization of Global and Transnational Television Channels
      Broadcast Television Genre Flows
      Versus Satellite, Cable, and Internet Flows

Chapter 9. Making Sense of Hybridization
   From Local to Multiple Level and Cultural Identity
   The Process of Hybridization
   Researching Aesthetic and Cultural Geographies
   Case Studies
   Languages and Cultures
   Multilevel Identity and Hybridization
   Television Working-Group
   Middle-Class
Chapter 8. Multiple Proximities Between Television Genres and Audiences: Choosing Between National, Transnational, and Global Television

Culture-Bound Reception and Multiple Proximities

Genre Proximity
Cultural Shareability
Thematic Proximity
Value Proximity

Cultural Capital, Cultural Proximity, and the Audience

Cultural Capital and Media Choices in Brazil
Media Access, Cultural Capital, and Class in Brazil
Cultural Capital in Rural Communities

Layers of Reception Within Brazil and Italy
Marimar in Rural Northeast Brazil
Terra Nostra in the Italy of the North and in the Italy of the South

Cultural Proximity Within Culturally Bound Reception Practices

Chapter 9. Making Sense of World Television:
Hybridization or Multilayered Cultural Identities?

From Local to Global
Multiple Levels of Audience Identity and Cultural Choices
The Process of Hybridization
Hybridization Versus Multiple Layers of Identity and Culture
Multiple Identifications
Researching Audiences and Their Identities
Cultural Geography: Cultural Distance, Global, National, and Local Identities

Case Example—In the Nation’s Periphery:
Rejecting Cosmopolitan Mores in National Television

Language/Culture-Defined Spaces and Markets
Multilevel Identities and Social Class
Hybridization and Social Class

Television, Cultural Geography, and Poor Brazilians
Working-Class Cultural Identity
Middle-Class Cultural Identity
Upper-Middle- and Upper-Class Cultural Identity
Some Broadly Shared Globalization via Television
Hybridization: Race and Ethnic Identity
Gender Identity and Television
Telenovelas, Gender, Sexuality,
National Values, and Local Values
Layers of Identity as Boundaries for Choices and Understandings
Layers of Identities as Mediators of Media Meaning
Reconfiguration and Synthesis of Identities

Appendix 257
References R-1
Index I-1
About the Author A-1

This book reflects work more recently by him started in a 1972 under ment at Stanford Univers a strong interest that led and Diplomacy, where R and others I met or stud tance of development an Although I had been also been raised with a some mistaken idealism countries, and with the n very well and having ti joined the U.S. Informat then separate from the S five in Washington, wh Bob Brown, Bob Cross, and Norman Painter he Brazil, and social resea Michigan summer insti Research enabled me t erable patience of my w tion at the time) enable work at the USIS Of ments of crucial suppo former USIS, which wa Department in the late 1

In Brazil, I also met me to this day: José M