Global TV

New Media and the Cold War,
1946–69

JAMES SCHWOCH

University of Illinois Press
URBANA AND CHICAGO
Contents

Acknowledgments  xi
Abbreviations  xiii

Introduction  1

PART 1: THE FIRST STRAND

1. "A Facet of East-West Problems"  17
2. "A Western Mind Would Consider
   This Kind of Spectacle as Stupid"  31
3. "The Key to Many of These Countries
   Is Not the Mud Hut Population"  43
4. "A Group of Angry Young Intellectuals"  61

PART 2: THE SECOND STRAND

5. "We Can Give the World a Vision of America"  79
6. "A Record of Some Kind in the History of International Communication"  94
7. "Something of That Sense of World Citizenship"  118
8. "A New Idea Capable of Uniting the Thoughts of People All Over the Earth"  139
So many people in so many places over so many years and for so many reasons that it is not in attempting to name them all that I want to acknowledge the infinite variety of the sources from which my work is drawn. I have been so fortunate in living in the United States and similar countries, including the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, and the United States, that I have been able to draw on a great many resources. Many universities, including the University of California at Los Angeles, Macalester College, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, the University of Florida Atlantic, and the University of New York, have hosted me. The Ford Foundation, the Fulbright Foundation, and the International Institute of Public Administration have supported my work, and many other institutions have provided financial and intellectual support. The following are some of the people and institutions who have contributed to my work:

Kennedy, and many others would have been grateful for the Fello
Fellowships, and the Fulbright and the International Institute of Public Administration have supported my work, and many other institutions have provided financial and intellectual support. The following are some of the people and institutions who have contributed to my work:

Many universities, including the University of California at Los Angeles, Macalester College, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, the University of Florida Atlantic, and the University of New York, have hosted me.

The Ford Foundation, the Fulbright Foundation, and the International Institute of Public Administration have supported my work, and many other institutions have provided financial and intellectual support. The following are some of the people and institutions who have contributed to my work:

Kennedy, and many others would have been grateful for the Fellowships, and the Fulbright and the International Institute of Public Administration have supported my work, and many other institutions have provided financial and intellectual support. The following are some of the people and institutions who have contributed to my work:

Many universities, including the University of California at Los Angeles, Macalester College, Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, the University of Florida Atlantic, and the University of New York, have hosted me.