Beauty and the Male Body in Byzantium
Perceptions and Representations in Art and Text

Myrto Hatzaki
Contents

Acknowledgements
ix

Introduction
1

1 The Byzantine Ideal of Beauty: Definitions and Perceptions
   A Byzantine ideal of beauty
   The real and the ideal: Beauty between fact and fiction
   Gender, the image and the mask of beauty
   On the beauty of men
   7
   8
   14
   24
   29

2 Only Skin-Deep: Beauty and Ugliness between Good and Evil
   The varied face of ugliness
   Handsome heroes, ugly villains and other half-truths
   The handsome executioner
   Beauty is as beauty does?
   33
   34
   39
   42
   46

3 Beauty and Power and Beauty as Power
   Beauty as a force of action
   The beautiful body as statue
   The beauty of harmony and symmetry
   49
   49
   52
   58

4 The Beauty of Broken Bodies: Pain, Eloquence and Emotion
   The beauty of the dead Christ
   Painting the unsayable
   Beauty and the horror of death
   The beauty of images, rhetoric and the power of emotion
   66
   67
   73
   75
   78
Contents

5 Angels and Eunuchs: The Beauty of Liminal Masculinity
- The angel's body between word and image
- ‘Beautiful, blond and resembling the eunuchs of the palace’
- The angel and the Adam’s apple
- The beauty of ‘eternal springtime’
- Beauty and the captivated gaze

6 The Fragile Beauty of Soldiers
- Beautiful soldiers on display
- Between Ares and Eros: Dangerous beauty and the soldier’s fragile masculinity
- The unkempt beauty of military masculinity

Conclusion
Notes
List of Illustrations
Bibliography
Illustration Sources
Index